BOOK I.

CHAP. I.

Shewing the wholeſome Uſes drawn from recording the Atchievements of thoſe wonderful Productions of Nature called GREAT MEN.

AS it is neceſſary that all great and ſurprizing Events, the Deſigns of which are laid, conducted, and brought to Perfection by the utmoſt Force of human Invention and Art, ſhould be managed by great and eminent Men, ſo the Lives of ſuch may be juſtly and properly ſtyled the Quinteſſence of Hiſtory. In theſe, when delivered to us by ſenſible Writers, we are not only moſt agreeably entertained, but uſefully inſtructed; for beſides the attaining hence a conſummate Knowledge of human Nature in general; its ſecret Springs, various Windings, and perplexed Mazes; we have here before our Eyes, lively Examples of whatever is amiable or deteſtable, worthy of Admiration or Abhorrence, and are conſequently taught in a Manner infinitely more effectual than by Precept, what we are eagerly to imitate or carefully to avoid.

But beſides the two obvious Advantages of ſurveying as it were in a Picture, the true Beauty of Virtue, and Deformity of Vice, we may moreover learn from Plutarch, Nepos, Suetonius, and other Biographers this uſeful Leſſon, not too haſtily nor in the Groſs to beſtow either our Praiſe or Cenſure: Since we ſhall often find ſuch a Mixture of Good and Evil in the ſame Character, that it may require a very very accurate Judgment and elaborate Inquiry to determine which Side the Ballance turns: for tho' we ſometimes meet with an Ariſtides or a Brutus, a Lyſander or a Nero, yet far the greater Number are of the mixt Kind; neither totally good nor bad; their greateſt Virtues being obſcured and allayed by their Vices, and thoſe again ſoftened and coloured over by their Virtues.

OF this Kind was the illuſtrious Perſon whoſe Hiſtory we here now undertake; who, as he was embelliſhed with many of the greateſt and nobleſt Endowments, ſo theſe could not well be ſaid to be abſolutely pure and without Allay. If we view one Side of his Character only, he muſt be acknowledged equal, if not ſuperior to moſt of the Heroes of Antiquity: But if we turn the Reverſe, it muſt be confeſſed our Admiration will be a little abated, and his Character will ſavour rather of the Weakneſs of modern than the uniform Greatneſs of ancient Heroes.

Digitized by Google

We would not therefore be underſtood to affect giving the Reader a perfect or conſummate Pattern of human Virtue; but rather by faithfully recording the little Imperfections which ſomewhat darkened the Luſtre of his great Qualities, to teach the Leſſon we have above mentioned, and induce our Reader with us to lament the Frailty of human Nature, and to convince him that no Mortal, after a thorough Scrutiny, can be a proper Object of our Adoration.

But before we enter on this great Work, we muſt endeavour to remove ſome Errors of Opinion which Mankind have by the Diſingenuity of Writers contracted: For thoſe from their Fear of attacking or contradicting the obſolete Doctrines of a Set of ſimple Fellows called, in Deriſion, Sages or Philoſophers, have endeavoured as much as poſſible, to confound the Ideas of Greatneſs and Goodneſs, whereas no two Things can poſſibly be more diſtinct from each other. For Greatneſs conſiſts in bringing all Manner of Miſchief on Mankind, and Good-

Digitized by Google

Goodneſs in removing it from them. Now, tho' the Writer, if he will confine himſelf to Truth, is obliged to draw a perfect Picture of the former in all the Actions which he records of his Hero, yet to reconcile his Work with thoſe abſurd Doctrines abovementioned, he is ever guilty of interſperſing Reflections in Reality to the Diſadvantage of that great Perfection, Uniformity of Character; for Inſtance, in the Hiſtories of Alexander and Cæſar, we are frequently reminded of their Benevolence and Generoſity. When the former had with Fire and Sword overrun a whole Empire, and deſtroyed the Lives of Millions of innocent People, we are told as an Example of his Benevolence, that he did not cut the Throat of an old Woman, and raviſh her Daughters whom he had before undone: And when the mighty Cæſar had with wonderful Greatneſs of Mind deſtroyed the Liberties of his Country, and gotten all the Power into his own Hands, we receive, as an Evidence of his Generoſity, his Largeſſes to his Followers and Tools, by whoſe Means he had accompliſhed his Purpoſe, and by whoſe Aſſiſtance he was to eſtabliſh it.

Now who doth not ſee that ſuch ſneaking Qualities as theſe are rather to be bewailed as Imperfections than admired as Ornaments in thoſe Great Men, rather obſcuring their Glory and holding them back in their Race to Greatneſs, and unworthy the End for which they ſeem to have come into the World, viz. of perpetrating vaſt and mighty Miſchief?

We hope our Reader will have Reaſon juſtly to acquit us of any ſuch confounding Ideas in the following Pages, in which, as we are to record the Actions of a Great Man, ſo we have no where mentioned any ſpark of Goodneſs which hath diſcovered itſelf either faintly in him, or more glaringly in any other Perſon, but as a Meanneſs and Imperfection, diſqualifying them for Undertakings which lead to Honour and Eſteem among Men.

As our Hero had as little as perhaps is to be found of that Meanneſs, indeed only enough enough to make him Partaker of the Imperfection of Humanity, and not the Perfection of Dæmoniſm, we have ventured to call him THE GREAT; nor do we doubt but our Reader will, when he hath peruſed his Story, concur with us in allowing him that Title.

CHAP. II.

Giving an Account of as many of our Hero's Anceſtors as can be gathered out of the Rubbiſh of Antiquity, which hath been carefully ſifted for that Purpoſe.

MR. Jonathan Wild, or Wyld (for he himſelf did not always agree in one Method of ſpelling his Name) was deſcended from the Great Wolfſtan Wild, who came over with Hengiſt, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf very eminently at that famous Feſtival where the Britons were ſo treacherouſly murdered by the Saxons; for when the Word was given, i. e. Nemet eour

Saxes, Take out your Swords, this Gentleman being a little hard of hearing, miſtook the Sound for Nemet her Sacs, Take out their Purſes; inſtead therefore of applying to the Throat, he immediately applied to the Pocket of his Gueſt, and contented himſelf with taking all that he had, without attempting his Life.

THE next Anceſtor of our Hero, who was remarkably eminent, was Wild, ſurnamed Langfanger or Longfinger. He flouriſhed in the Reign of Henry III. and was ſtrictly attached to Hubert de Burgh, whoſe Friendſhip he was recommended to by his great Excellence in an Art, of which Hubert was himſelf the Inventor: He could, without the Knowledge of the Proprietor, with great Eaſe and Dexterity draw forth a Man's Purſe from any Part of his Garment where it was depoſited, and hence he derived his Surname. This Gentleman was the firſt of his Family who had the Honour to ſuffer for the Good of his Country: On whom a Wit of that Time made the following Epitaph.

O Shame o' Juſtice, Wild is hang'd,
For that'n hath a Pocket fang'd,
While ſafe old Hubert, and his Gang,
Doth the Pocket of the Nation fang.

LANGFENGER left a Son named Edward, whom he had carefully inſtructed in the Art for which he himſelf was ſo famous. This Edward ſerved as a Voluntier under the famous Sir John Falſtaffe, and by his gallant Demeanor ſo recommended himſef to his Captain, that he would have certainly been promoted by him, had Harry the Fifth kept his Word with his old Companion.

AFTER the Death of Edward, the Family remained in ſome Obſcurity down to the Reign of Charles the Firſt, when James Wild diſtinguiſhed himſelf on both Sides the Queſtion in the Civil Wars, paſſing from one to t'other, as Heaven ſeemed to declare itſelf in Favour of either Party. At the End of the Wars, James, not being rewarded according to his Merits, as is uſually the Caſe of ſuch impartial Perſons, Perſons, he aſſociated himſelf with a brave Man of thoſe Times, whoſe Name was Hind, and declared open War with both Parties. He was ſucceſsful in ſeveral Actions, and ſpoiled many of the Enemy; till at length, being over-powered and taken, he was, contrary to the Law of Arms, put baſely and cowardly to death, by a Combination between twelve Men of the Enemy's Party, who after ſome Conſultation unanimouſly agreed on the ſaid Murder.

THIS Edward took to Wife Rebecca the Daughter of the abovementioned John Hind Eſq; by whom he had Iſſue John, Edward, Thomas and Jonathan, and three Daughters, namely, Grace, Charity and Honour. John followed the Fortunes of his Father, and ſuffering with him, left no Iſſue. Edward was ſo remarkable for his compaſſionate Temper, that he ſpent his Life in ſoliciting the Cauſes of the diſtreſſed Captives in Newgate, and is reported to have held a ſtrict Friendſhip with an eminent Divine, who ſolicited the ſpiritual Cauſes of the ſaid Captives. He married married Editha Daughter and Coheireſs of Geoffry Snap Gent. who long enjoyed an Office under the High Sheriff of London and Middleſex, by which with great Reputation he acquired a handſome Fortune; by her he had no Iſſue. Thomas went very young abroad to one of our American Colonies, and hath not been ſince heard of. As for the Daughters, Grace was married to a Gentleman of Yorkſhire, who dealt in Horſes. Charity took to Huſband an eminent Broker of Change-Alley: And Honour the youngeſt, died unmarried. She lived many Years in this Town, was a great frequenter of Plays, and uſed to be remarkable for diſtributing Oranges to all who would accept of them.

Jonathan married Elizabeth Daughter of Ralph Hollow Eſq; and by her had Jonathan, who is the illuſtrious Subject of theſe Memoirs.

CHAP. III.

The Birth, Parentage, and Education of Mr. Jonathan Wild the Great.

IT is obſervable that Nature ſeldom produces any one who is afterwards to act a notable Part on the Stage of Life, but ſhe gives ſome Warning of her Intention; and as the dramatic Poet generally prepares the Entry of every conſiderable Character, with a ſolemn Narrative, or at leaſt a great Flouriſh of Drums and Trumpets; ſo doth this our Alma Mater by ſome ſhrewd Hints, pre-admoniſh us of her Intention. Thus Aſtyages, who was the Grandfather of Cyrus, dreamed that his Daughter was brought to Bed of a Vine whoſe Branches over-ſpread all Aſia; and Hecuba, while big with Paris, dreamed that ſhe was delivered of a Firebrand that ſet all Troy in Flames; ſo did the Mother of our Great Man, while ſhe was with child of him, dream that ſhe was enjoyed in the Night by the Gods Mercury, and Priapus. This Dream puzzled all the learned learned Aſtrologers of her Time, ſeeming to imply in it a Contradiction; Mercury being the God of Ingenuity, and Priapus the Terror of thoſe who practiſed it. What made this Dream the more wonderful, and perhaps the true Cauſe of its being remembred, was a very extraordinary Circumſtance, ſufficiently denoting ſomething preter-natural in it; for tho' ſhe had never heard even the Name of either of theſe Gods, ſhe repeated theſe very Words in the Morning, with only a ſmall Miſtake of the Quantity of the latter, which ſhe choſe to call Priăpus inſtead of Priāpus; and her Huſband ſwore that tho' he might poſſibly have named Mercury to her, for he had heard of ſuch an Heathen God, he never in his Life could have any wife put her in Mind of that other Deity, with whom he had no Acquaintance.

ANOTHER remarkable Incident was, that during her whole Pregnancy, ſhe conſtantly longed for every thing ſhe ſaw; nor could be ſatisfied with her Wiſh unleſs ſhe injoyed it clandeſtinely; and as Nature by true and accurate Obſervers is remarked to give us us no Appetites without furniſhing us with the Means of gratifying them; ſo had ſhe at this Time a moſt marvellous glutinous Quality attending her Fingers, to which as to Birdlime, every thing cloſely adhered that ſhe handled.

To omit other Stories, ſome of which may be perhaps the Growth of Superſtition, we proceed to the Birth of our Hero, who made his firſt Appearance on this Great Theatre, the very Day when the Plague firſt broke out in 1665. Some ſay his Mother was delivered of him in an Houſe of an orbicular or round Form in Covent-Garden; but of this we are not certain. He was ſome Years afterwards baptized by the famous Mr. Titus Oates.

Nothing very remarkable paſt in his Years of Infancy, ſave, that as the Letters Th are the moſt difficult of Pronunciation, and the laſt which a Child attains to the Utterance of, ſo they were the firſt that came with any Readineſs from young Maſter Wild. Nor muſt we omit the early Indications which he gave of the Sweetneſs neſs of his Temper; for tho' he was by no Means to be terrified into Compliance, yet might he by a Sugar-plumb be brought to your Purpoſe: Indeed, to ſay the Truth, he was to be bribed to any thing, which made many ſay, he was certainly born to be a Great Man.

HE was ſcarce ſettled at School before he gave Marks of his lofty and aſpiring Temper; and was regarded by all his School-Fellows with that Deference which Men generally pay to thoſe ſuperior Genius's who will exact it of them. If an Orchard was to be robb'd, Wild was conſulted, and tho' he was himſelf ſeldom concerned in the Execution of the Deſign, yet was he always Concerter of it, and Treaſurer of the Booty; ſome little Part of which he would now and then, with wonderful Generoſity, beſtow on thoſe who took it; he was generally very ſecret on theſe Occaſions: But if any offered to plunder of his own Head, without acquainting Maſter Wild and making a Depoſite of the Booty, he was ſure to have an Information againſt him lodged with the School-Maſter,

Maſter, and to be ſeverely puniſhed for his Pains.

He diſcovered ſo little Attention to School-Learning, that his Maſter, who was a very wiſe and worthy Man, ſoon gave over all Care and Trouble on this Account, and acquainting his Parents that their Son proceeded extremely well in his Studies, he permitted his Pupil to follow his own Inclinations; perceiving they led him to nobler Purſuits than the Sciences, which are generally acknowledged to be a very unprofitable Study, and greatly to hinder the Advancement of Men in the World: But tho' Maſter Wild was not eſteemed the readieſt at making his Exerciſe, he was univerſally allowed to be the moſt dextrous at ſtealing it of all his School-Fellows: Being never detected in ſuch furtive Compoſitions, nor indeed in any other Exercitations of his great Talents, which all inclined the ſame Way, but once, when he had laid violent Hands on a Book called Gradus ad Parnaſſum, i. e. A Step towards Parnaſſus; on which Account his Maſter, who was a Man of moſt wonderful Wit and Sagacity, is ſaid ſaid to have told him, he wiſhed it might not prove in the Event, Gradus ad Patibulum, i. e. A Step towards the Gallows.

BUT tho' he would not give himſelf the Pains requiſite to acquire a competent ſufficiency in the learned Languages, yet did he readily liſten with Attention to others, eſpecially when they tranſlated the Claſſical Authors to him; nor was he in the leaſt backward at all ſuch Times, to expreſs his Approbation. He was wonderfully pleaſed with that Paſſage in the Eleventh Iliad, where Achilles is ſaid to have bound two Sons of Priam upon a Mountain, and afterwards releaſed them for a Sum of Money. This was, he ſaid, alone ſufficient to refute thoſe who affected a Contempt for the Wiſdom of the Ancients, and an undeniable Teſtimony of the great Antiquity of * Priggiſm. He was raviſhed with the Account which Neſtor gives in the ſame Book, of the rich Booty which he bore off (i. e. ſtole) from the Eleans. He was deſirous of having this often repeated to him, and at the End of every Repetition, he conſtantly fetched a deep Sigh, and ſaid, It was a glorious Booty.

When the Story of Cacus was read to him out of the Eighth Æneid, he generouſly pitied the unhappy Fate of that Great Man, to whom he thought Hercules much too ſevere: One of his School-Fellows commending the Dexterity of drawing the Oxen backward by their Tails into his Den, he ſmiled, and with ſome Diſdain ſaid, He could have taught him a better Way.

He was a paſſionate Admirer of Heroes, particularly Alexander the Great, between whom and the late King of Sweden he would frequently draw Parallels. He was much delighted with the Accounts of the Czar's Retreat from the latter, who carried off the Inhabitants of great Cities to people his own Country. This, he ſaid, was not once thought of by Alexander; but, added, perhaps he did not want them.

Happy had it been for him, if he had confined himſelf to this Sphere; but his chief, chief, if not only Blemiſh, was that he would ſometimes, from an Humility in his Nature, too pernicious to true Greatneſs, condeſcend to an Intimacy with inferior Things and Perſons. Thus the Spaniſh Rogue was his favourite Book, and the Cheats of Scapin his favourite Play.

THE young Gentleman being now at the Age of ſeventeen, his Father, from a fooliſh Prejudice to our Univerſities, and out of a falſe, as well as exceſſive Regard to his Morals, brought his Son to Town, where he reſided with him till he was of an Age to travel. Whilſt he was here, all imaginable Care was taken of his Inſtruction, his Father endeavouring his utmoſt to inculcate Principles of Honour and Gentility into his Son.

CHAP. IV.

Mr. Wild's firſt Entrance into the World. His Acquaintance with Count La Ruſe.

AN Accident happened ſoon after his Arrival in Town, which almoſt ſaved him his whole Labour on this Head, and provided Maſter Wild a better Tutor than any Care or Expence could have furniſhed him with. The old Gentleman, it ſeems, was a FOLLOWER of the Fortunes of Mr. Snap, Son of Mr. Geoffry Snap, whom we have before mentioned to have enjoyed a reputable Office under the Sheriff of London and Middleſex, whoſe Daughter, the Siſter of this Gentleman, had inter-married with the Wilds. Mr. Snap, being thereto well warranted, had laid violent Hands on, or, as the Vulgar expreſs it, arreſted one Count La Ruſe, a Man of conſiderable Figure in thoſe Days, and had confined him to his own Houſe, till he could find two Seconds who would in a formal formal Manner give their Words that the Count ſhould, at a certain Day and Place appointed, anſwer all that one Thomas Thimble a Taylor had to ſay to him; which Thomas Thimble, it ſeems, alledged that the Count had, according to the Law of the Realm, made over his Body to him as a Security for ſome Suits of Cloaths to him delivered by the ſaid Thomas Thimble. Now, as the Count, tho' perfectly a Man of Honour, could not immediately find theſe Seconds, he was obliged for ſome Time to reſide at Mr. Snap's Houſe; for it ſeems the Law of the Land is, that whoever owes another 10 l. may be on the Oath of that Perſon, immediately taken up and carried away from his own Houſe and Family, and kept abroad till he is made to owe 50 l. whether he will or no; for which he is, perhaps, afterwards obliged to lie in Gaol; and all this without any Trial had, or any other Evidence of the Debt than the aboveſaid Oath, which if untrue, as it often happens, you have no Remedy againſt the Perjurer; he was, forſooth! miſtaken.

Digitized by Google

BUT tho' Mr. Snap would not (as perhaps by the nice Rules of Honour he was obliged) diſcharge the Count on his Parole; yet did he not (as by the ſtrict Rules of Law he was enabled) confine him to his Chamber. The Count had his Liberty of the whole Houſe, and Mr. Snap uſing only the Precaution of keeping his Doors well lock'd and barr'd, took his Priſoner's Word that he would not go out.

MR. Snap had by his Second Lady two Daughters, who were now in the Bloom of their Youth and Beauty. Theſe young Ladies, like Damſels in Romance, compaſſionated the captive Count, and endeavoured by all Means to make his Confinement leſs irkſome to him; which, tho' they were both very beautiful, they could not attain by any other Way ſo effectually, as by engaging with him at Cards, in which Contentions, as will appear hereafter, the Count was greatly ſkilful.

As

As Whiſk and Swabbers was the Game then in the chief Vogue, they were oblig'd to look for a fourth Perſon, in order to make up their Parties. Mr. Snap himſelf would ſometimes relax his Mind, from the violent Fatigues of his Employment, by theſe Recreations; and ſometimes a neighbouring young Gentleman, or Lady, came in to their Aſſiſtance: But the moſt frequent Gueſt was young Maſter Wild, who had been educated from his Infancy with the Miſs Snaps, and was, by all the Neighbours, allotted for the Huſband of Miſs Tiſhy, or Lætitia, the younger of the two; for though, being his Couſin-German, ſhe was perhaps, in the Eye of a ſtrict Conſcience, ſomewhat too nearly related to him; yet the old People on both Sides, tho' ſufficiently ſcrupulous in nice Matters, agreed to overlook this Objection.

MEN of great Genius as eaſily diſcover one another as Free-Maſons can. It was therefore no Wonder that the Count ſoon conceived an Inclination to an Intimacy with our young Hero, whoſe vaſt Abilities could not be concealed from one of the Count's Diſcernment; for though this latter was ſo expert at his Cards, that he was proverbially ſaid, to play the whole Game, he was no Match for Maſter Wild, who, inexperienced as he was, notwithſtanding all the Art, the Dexterity, and often the Fortune of his Adverſary, never failed to ſend him away from the Table with leſs in his Pocket than he brought to it; for indeed Langfanger himſelf could not have extracted a Purſe with more Ingenuity than our young Hero.

His Hands made frequent Viſits to the Count's Pocket, before the latter had entertained any Suſpicion of him, imputing the ſeveral Loſſes he ſuſtained rather tothe innocent and ſprightly Frolick of Miſs Doſhy, with which, as ſhe indulged him with little innocent Freedoms about her Perſon in Return, he thought himſelf obliged to be contented; but one Night, when Wild imagined the Count aſleep, he made ſo unguarded an Attack upon him, that the other caught him in the Fact: However, he did not think proper to acquaint him with the Diſco-

Diſcovery he had made; but, preventing him from any Booty at that Time, he only took Care for the future to button his Pockets, and pack the Cards with double Induſtry.

So far was this Detection from cauſing any Quarrel between theſe two Prigs, that theſe and many other ſuch Inſtances of his Ingenuity, operated ſo violently on the Count, that, notwithſtanding the Diſparity which Age, Title, and above all Dreſs, had ſet between them, he reſolved to enter into an Acquaintance, which ſoon produced a perfect Intimacy, and that a Friendſhip which had a longer Duration than is common to that Paſſion between Perſons, who only propoſe to themſelves the common Advantage of eating, drinking, whoring, or borrowing Money; which Ends as they ſoon fail, ſo doth the Friendſhip founded upon them.

A Dialogue between young Maſter Wild and Count La Ruſe, which, having extended to the Rejoinder, had a very quiet, eaſy, and natural Concluſion.

ONE Evening after the Miſs Snaps were retired to Reſt, the Count thus addreſſed himſelf to young Wild: " You cannot, I apprehend, Mr. Wild, be " ſuch a Stranger to your own great Ca- " pacity, as to be ſurprized when I tell " you, I have often viewed, with a Mix- " ture of Aſtoniſhment and Concern, your " ſhining Qualities confined to a Sphere, " where they can never reach the Eyes of " thoſe who would introduce them proper- " ly into the World, and raiſe you to an " Eminence, where you may blaze out " to the Admiration of all Men. I aſſure " you I am pleaſed with my Captivity, " when I reflect, I am likely to owe to it " an Acquaintance, and I hope Friendſhip, " with

He was eagerly proceeding when, caſting his Eyes on the Count, he perceived him to be faſt aſleep, wherefore having gently jogged him, in order to take his Leave, and promiſed to return to him the next Morning to Breakfaſt, they ſeparated; the Count retired to Reſt, and Maſter Wild to a Night-Cellar.

Farther Conferences between the Count and Maſter Wild, with other Matters of the GREAT Kind.

BEING met the next Morning, the Count, (who, though he did not agree with the whole of his Friend's Doctrine, was, however, highly pleaſed with his Argument) began to bewail the Misfortune of his Captivity, and the Backwardneſs of Friends to aſſiſt each other in their Neceſſities; but what vexed him, he ſaid, moſt, was the Cruelty of the Fair; for he entruſted Wild with the Secret of his having had an Intrigue with Miſs Theodoſia, the eldeſt of the Miſs Snaps, ever ſince his Confinement, but could not prevail with her to ſet him at Liberty. Wild anſwered, with a Smile: "It was no Wonder a Woman ſhould wiſh to confine her Lover, "where ſhe might be ſure of having him "entirely to herſelf; but added, he believed he could tell him a Method of certainly procuring his Eſcape." The Count eagerly beſought him to acquaint him with it. Wild told him: "Bribery was the "ſureſt Means, and adviſed him to apply "to the Maid." The Count thanked him, but returned: "That he had not a Far-"thing left beſides one Guinea, which he "had then given her to change." To which Wild ſaid: "He muſt make it up "with Promiſes, which he ſuppoſed he "was Courtier enough to know how to "put off." The Count greatly applauded the Advice, and ſaid, he hoped he ſhould be able in Time to perſuade him to condeſcend to be a Great Man, for which he was ſo perfectly well qualified.

THIS Method being concluded on, the two Friends ſat down to Cards, a Circumſtance which I ſhould not have mentioned but for the ſake of obſerving the prodigious Force of Habit; for, though the Count knew, if he won never ſo much of Mr. Wild, he ſhould not receive a Shilling, yet could he not refrain from packing the Cards; nor could Wild keep his Hands out of his Friend's Pockets, though he knew there was nothing in them.

WHEN

WHEN the Maid came home, the Count began to put it to her; offered her all he had, and promiſed Mountains in futuro; but all in vain, the Maid's Honeſty was impregnable. She ſaid, "She would not "break her Truſt for the World; no, not "if ſhe could gain a Million of Money by "it." Upon which Wild ſtepping up, and telling her: "She need not fear loſing her "Place, for it would never be found out; "that they could throw a Pair of Sheets "into the Street, by which it might ap- "pear he got out at Window; that he "himſelf would ſwear he ſaw him de- "ſcending; that the Money would be ſo "much Gains in her Pocket; that, beſides "his Promiſes, which he might depend on "being performed, ſhe would receive from "him twenty Shillings and Nine-pence in "ready Money, (for ſhe had only laid out "Three-pence in plain Spaniſh) and that "beſides his Honour, the Count ſhould "leave a Pair of Gold Buttons (which "afterwards turned out to be Braſs) of "great Value in her Hands as a farther "Pawn; and, laſtly, that he himſelf would

" lend his Friend Eighteen pence, being all " he had about him, to depoſite in præ- " ſenti.

THESE Arguments at length prevailed with the Maid, who had always the Reputation of a very honeſt Servant; and ſhe promiſed faithfully in the Evening to open the Door to the Count.

THUS did our young Hero, not only lend his Rhetorick, which few People care to do without a Fee, but his Money too, Eighteen pence, a Sum which many a good Man would have made eighteen Excuſes before he would have parted with to his Friend, and procured him his Liberty.

BUT it would be highly derogatory from the GREAT Character of Wild, ſhould the Reader imagine he lent ſuch a Sum as eighteen pence to a Friend without the leaſt View of ſerving himſelf. As, therefore, he may eaſily account for it in a manner more advantageous to our Hero's Reputation, by concluding that he had ſome intereſted View in the Count's Enlargement, we hope he will will judge with Charity, eſpecially as the Sequel makes it not only reaſonable but neceſſary to ſuppoſe he had ſome ſuch View.

A LONG Intimacy and Friendſhip ſubſiſted between the Count and Mr. Wild, who, being by the Advice of the Count dreſſed in good Cloaths, was by him introduced into the beſt Company. They conſtantly frequented the Aſſemblies, Auctions, Gaming-Tables, and Play-Houſes; at which laſt they ſaw two Acts every Night, and then retired without paying, being it ſeems an immemorial Privilege which the Beaus of the Town preſcribe for to themſelves. This, however, did not ſuit Wild's Temper who called it a Cheat, and objected againſt it, as requiring no Dexterity but what every Blockhead might put in Execution. He ſaid it was a Cuſtom very much ſavouring of the Sneaking-Budge, but neither ſo honourable nor ſo ingenious.

tune in the Funds. Women of Quality treated him with great Familiarity, young Ladies began to ſpread their Charms for him, when an Accident happened that put a Stop to his Continuance in a Way of Life too inſipid and inactive to afford Employment for thoſe great Talents, which were deſigned to make a much more conſiderable Figure in the World, than attends the Character of a Beau or a pretty Gentleman.

CHAP. VII.

Maſter Wild ſets out on his Travels, and returns home again. A very ſhort Chapter, containing infinitely more Time and leſs Matter than any other in the whole Story.

WE are ſorry we cannot indulge our Reader's Curioſity with a full and perfect Account of this Accident; but as there are ſuch various Accounts, one of which only can be true, and poſſibly, and

and indeed probably, none; inſtead of following the general Method of Hiſtorians, who in ſuch Caſes ſet down the various Reports, and leave to your own Conjecture which you will chuſe, we ſhall paſs them all over.

CERTAIN it is, that whatever this Accident was, it determined our Hero's Father to ſend his Son immediately abroad, for ſeven Years; and, which may ſeem ſomewhat remarkable, to his Majeſty's Plantations in America. That Part of the World being, as he ſaid, freer from Vices than the Courts and Cities of Europe, and conſequently leſs dangerous to corrupt a young Man's Morals. And as for the Advantages, the old Gentleman thought they were equal there with thoſe attained in the politer Climates; for travelling, he ſaid, was travelling in one Part of the World as well as another: It conſiſted in being ſuch a Time from home, and in traverſing ſo many Leagues; and appealed to Experience, whether moſt of our Travellers in France and Italy, did not prove at their Return,

Digitized by Google

Return, that they might have been ſent as profitably to Norway and Greenland?

ACCORDING to theſe Reſolutions of his Father, the young Gentleman went aboard a Ship, and with a great deal of good Company ſet out for the American Hemiſphere. The exact Time of his Stay is ſomewhat uncertain; moſt probably longer than was intended: But howſoever long his Abode there was, it muſt be a Blank in this Hiſtory; as the whole Story contains not one Adventure worthy the Reader's Notice; being indeed, a continued Scene of whoring, drinking, and removing from one Place to another.

TO confeſs a Truth, we are ſo aſhamed of the ſhortneſs of this Chapter, that we would have done a Violence to our Hiſtory, and have inſerted an Adventure or two of ſome other Traveller: To which Purpoſe we borrowed the Journals of ſeveral young Gentlemen who have lately made the Tour of Europe; but to our great Sorrow could not extract a ſingle Incident ſtrong enough to juſtify the Theft to our Conſciences.

WHEN

Digitized by Google

WHEN we conſider the ridiculous Figure this Chapter muſt make, being the Hiſtory of no leſs than eight Years, our only comfort is, that the Hiſtory of ſome Mens lives, and perhaps of ſome Men who have made a Noiſe in the World, are in Reality as abſolute Blanks as the Travels of our Hero. As, therefore, we ſhall make ſufficient Amends in the Sequel for this Inanity, we ſhall haſten on to Matters of true Importance, and immenſe Greatneſs. At preſent we content ourſelves with ſetting down our Hero where we took him up, after acquainting our Reader that he went abroad, ſtaid ſeven Years, and then came home again.

CHAP. VIII.

An Adventure where Wild, in the Diviſion of the Booty, exhibits an aſtoniſhing Inſtance of GREATNESS.

THE Count was one Night very ſucceſsful at the Hazard-Table, where Wild, who was juſt returned from his Travels, vels, was then preſent; as was likewiſe a young Gentleman whoſe Name was Bob Bagſhot, an Acquaintance of Mr. Wild's, and of whom he entertained a great Opinion; taking therefore Mr. Bagſhot aſide, he adviſed him to provide himſelf (if he had them not about him) with a Caſe of Piſtols, and to attack the Count, in his Way home, promiſing to plant himſelf near with the ſame Arms, as a Corps de Reſerve, and to come up on Occaſion. This was accordingly executed, and the Count obliged to ſurrender to ſavage Force what he had in ſo genteel and civil a Manner taken at Play.

And as it is a wiſe and philoſophical Obſervation, that one Misfortune never comes alone, the Count had hardly paſſed the Examination of Mr. Bagſhot, when he fell into the Hands of Mr. Snap, who, in Company with Mr. Wild the elder, and one or two more Gentlemen, being it ſeems thereto well warranted, laid hold of the unfortunate Count, and conveyed him back to the ſame Houſe from which, by the Aſſiſt-

MR. Wild and Mr. Bagſhot went together to the Tavern, where Mr. Bagſhot, generouſly (as he thought) offered to ſhare the Booty, and having divided the Money into two unequal Heaps, and added a golden Snuff-Box to the leſſer Heap, he deſired Mr. Wild to take his Choice.

MR. Wild immediately conveyed the larger Share of the Ready into his Pocket, according to an excellent Maxim of his: "Firſt ſecure what Share you can, before you "wrangle for the reſt:" And then, turning to his Companion, he aſked him, with a ſtern Countenance, whether he intended to keep all that Sum to himſelf? Mr. Bagſhot anſwered, with ſome Surprize, that he thought Mr. Wild had no Reaſon to complain; for it was ſurely fair, at leaſt on his Part, to content himſelf with an equal Share of the Booty, who had taken the whole. I grant you took it, replied Wild, "but, pray who propoſ-"ed or counſelled the taking it? Can you "ſay, that you have done more than ex-"ecuted

At which Words, he laid his Hand to his Sword. Wild, perceiving the little Succeſs the great Strength of his Arguments had met with, and the haſty Temper of his Friend, gave over his Deſign for the preſent, and told Bagſhot, he was only in Jeſt. But this Coolneſs had rather the Effect of Oil than Water thrown on the Flames of the other, who replied, in a Rage, " D——n me, I

" us lay the whole Booty on the Table,

who often declared that he looked upon borrowing to be as good a Way of taking as any, and as he called it, the genteeleſt Kind of Sneaking-Budge, putting up his Sword, and ſhaking his Friend by the Hand, told him, he had hit the Nail on the Head; it was really his preſent Neceſſity only that prevailed with him againſt his Will; for that his Honour was concerned to pay a conſiderable Sum the next Morning. Upon which, contenting himſelf with one Half of Bagſhot's Share, ſo that he had three Parts in four of the whole, he took leave of his Companion, and retired to reſt.

Wild pays a Viſit to Miſs Lætitia Snap. A Deſcription of that lovely young Creature, and the ſucceſsleſs Iſſue of Mr. Wild's Addreſſes.

THE next Morning when he waked, he began to think of paying a Viſit to Miſs Tiſby Snap; for tho' ſhe was really a Woman of Merit, and great Generoſity, yet Mr. Wild found a Preſent was ever moſt welcome to her, as being a Token of Reſpect in her Lover. He therefore went directly to a Toy-Shop, and there purchaſed a genteel Snuff-Box, with which he waited upon his Miſtreſs; whom he found in the moſt beautiful Deſhabille. Her lovely Hair hung wantonly over her Forehead, being neither white with, nor yet free from Powder; a neat double Clout which ſeemed to have been worn a few Times only, was pinned under her Chin; ſome Remains of that Art which Ladies im-improve Nature with, ſhone on her Cheeks. Her Body was looſely attired, without Stays or Jumps; ſo that her Breaſts had uncontroulled Liberty to diſplay their beauteous Orbs, which they did as low as her Girdle, a thin Covering of a rumpled Muzlin Handkerchief almoſt hid them from the Eyes, ſave in a few Parts where a good-natured Hole gave Opportunity to the naked Breaſt to appear, and put us in Mind by its Whiteneſs of the Fault in the Handkerchief, which might have otherwiſe paſt unobſerved. Her Gown was a Sattin of a whitiſh Colour, with about a dozen little Silver Spots upon it, ſo artificially interwoven, that they looked as if they had fallen there by Chance. This flying open, diſcovered a fine white Petticoat beautifully edged round the Bottom with a narrow Piece of half Gold-Lace, beneath this appeared another Petticoat ſtiffened with Whalebone, vulgarly called a Hoop, which was ſix Inches at leaſt below the other; and under this again appeared a red Stuff. She likewiſe diſplayed two pretty Feet covered with Silk, and adorned with Lace, and tied the right with a handſome Piece of blue Ribband; the left, as more unworthy, with a Piece of red Stuff, which ſeemed to have been a Strip of her Under-Petticoat. Such was the lovely Creature whom Mr. Wild attended. She received him at firſt with ſome Coldneſs, which Women of ſtrict Virtue by a commendable, tho' ſometimes painful Reſtraint, enjoin themſelves to their Lovers. The Snuff-Box being produced, was at firſt civilly, and indeed, gently refuſed: But on a ſecond Application accepted. The Tea-Table was ſoon called for, at which a Diſcourſe paſſed between theſe young Lovers, which could we ſet down with any Accuracy, would be very edifying as well as entertaining to our Reader; let it ſuffice then that the Wit, together with the Beauty of this young Creature, ſo inflamed the Paſſion of Wild, which, tho' an honourable Sort of a Paſſion, was at the ſame Time ſo extremely violent, that it tranſported him to Freedoms too offenſive to the nice Chaſtity of Lætitia, who was, to confeſs the Truth, more indebted to her own Strength for the Preſervation of her Virtue, than to the awful Reſpect or Backwardneſs of her Lover; for

for he was indeed ſo very urgent in his Addreſſes, that had he not with many Oaths promiſed her Marriage, we could ſcarce have been juſtified in calling his Paſſion ſtrictly honourable; but he was ſo remarkably attached to Decency, that he never offered any Violence to a young Lady without the moſt earneſt Promiſes of that kind, being, he ſaid, a Ceremonial due to their Modeſty, and which was ſo eaſily performed, that the Omiſſion could ariſe from nothing but the mere Wantonneſs of Brutality. The lovely Lætitia, either out of Prudence, or perhaps Religion, of which ſhe was a liberal Profeſſor, was deaf to all his Promiſes, and luckily invincible by his Force; for though ſhe had not learnt the vulgar Art of clenching her Fiſt, Nature had not, however, left her defenceleſs; for at the Ends of her Fingers ſhe wore Arms, which ſhe uſed with ſuch admirable Dexterity, that the hot Blood of Mr. Wild ſoon began to appear in ſeveral little Spots on his Face, and his full-blown Cheeks to reſemble that Part which Modeſty forbids a Boy to turn up any where but in publick School, after ſome Pedagogue, ſtrong of Arm, hath exerciſed his Talents thereon. Wild now retreated from the Conflict, and the victorious Lætitia, with becoming Triumph and noble Spirit, cried out, "D——n you, if this be your "Way of ſhewing your Love, I'll warrant "I give you enough on't." She then proceeded to talk of her Virtue, which Wild bid her carry to the Devil with her; and thus our Lovers parted.

A Diſcovery of ſome Matters concerning the chaſte Lætitia, which muſt wonderfully ſurprize, and perhaps affect our Reader.

MR. WILD was no ſooner departed, than the fair Conquereſs opening the Door of a Cloſet, called forth a young Gentleman, whom ſhe had there encloſed at the Approach of the other. The Name of this Gallant was Tom Smirk. He was Apprentice to a Tallow-Chandler, and was was indeed the greateſt Beau, and the greateſt Favourite of the Ladies, at the End of the Town where he lived. As we take Dreſs to be the Characteriſtic or efficient Quality of a Beau, we ſhall, inſtead of giving any Character of this young Gentleman, content ourſelves with deſcribing his Dreſs only to our Readers. He wore, then, a Pair of white Stockings on his Legs, and Pumps on his Feet; his Buckles were a large Piece of Pinchbeck Plate, which almoſt covered his whole Foot. His Breeches were of red Pluſh, which hardly reached his Knees; his Waſtecoat was a white Dimity richly embroidered with yellow Silk, over which he wore a blue Pluſh coat with Metal Buttons, a ſmart Sleeve, and a Cape reaching half way down his Back. His Wig was of a brown Colour, covering almoſt half his Pate, on which was hung on one Side a little laced Hat, but cocked with great Smartneſs. Such was the accompliſhed Smirk, who, at his iſſuing forth from the Cloſet, was received with open Arms by the amiable Lætitia. She addreſſed him by the tender Name of Dear Tommy; and told him ſhe had diſmiſt the odious odious Creature whom her Father intended for her Husband, and had now nothing to interrupt her Happiness with him.

HERE, Reader, thou must pardon us if we stop a while to lament the Capriciousness of Nature in forming this charming Part of the Creation, designed to complete the Happiness of Man; with their soft Innocence to allay his Ferocity, with their Sprightliness to sooth his Cares, and with their constant Friendship to relieve all the Troubles and Disappointments which can happen to him. Seeing, then, that this is universally certain, that these are the Blessings chiefly sought after, and generally found in every Wife, how must we lament that Disposition in these lovely Creatures, which leads them to prefer in their Favour those Individuals of the other Sex, who do not seem intended by Nature as her greatest Master-piece. For surely, however useful they may be in the Creation, as we are taught, that nothing, not even a Louse, is made in vain; yet these Beaus, even that most splendid and honoured Part, which, in this our Island, Nature loves to distinguish guiſh in Red, are not, as ſome think, the nobleſt Part of the Creation. For my own Part, let any Man chuſe to himſelf two Beaus, let them be Captains or Colonels, as well dreſſed Men as ever lived, really as fine Men, I would venture to oppoſe a ſingle Sir Iſaac Newton, a Shakeſpear, a Milton, or perhaps ſome few others to both theſe Beaus; nay, and I very much doubt, whether it had not been better for the World in general, that neither of theſe Beaus had ever been born, than that it ſhould have wanted the Benefit ariſing to it from the Labour of any one of thoſe Perſons.

IF this be true, how melancholy muſt be the Conſideration, that any ſingle Beau, eſpecially if he have but half a Yard of Ribbon in his Hat, ſhall weigh heavier, in the Scales of female Affection, than twenty Sir Iſaac Newtons. How muſt our Reader, who perhaps had wiſely accounted for the Reſiſtance which the chaſte Lætitia had made to the violent Addreſſes of the raviſhed (or rather raviſhing) Wild from that Lady's impregnable Virtue, how muſt he he bluſh, I ſay, to perceive her quit the Strictneſs of her Carriage, and abandon herſelf to thoſe looſe Freedoms which ſhe indulged to Smirk. But, alas! when we diſcover all, as, to preſerve the Fidelity of our Hiſtory, we muſt, when we relate that every Familiarity had paſt between them, and that the FAIR Lætitia (for we muſt, in this ſingle Inſtance, imitate Virgil, where he drops the pius and the pater, and drop our favourite Epithet of chaſte) the FAIR Lætitia had, I ſay, made Smirk as happy as Wild deſired to be, what muſt then be our Reader's Confuſion? We will, therefore, draw a Curtain over this Scene, from that Philogyny which is in us, and proceed to Matters, which, inſtead of diſhonouring the human Species, will greatly raiſe and ennoble it.

Containing as great and as noble Inſtances of human Greatneſs as are to be met with in ancient or modern Hiſtory. Concluding with ſome wholeſome Hints to the gay Part of Mankind.

WILD no ſooner parted from the chaſte Lætitia, than recollecting that his Friend the Count was returned to his Lodgings in the ſame Houſe, he reſolved to viſit him; for he was none of thoſe half-bred Fellows, who are aſhamed to ſee their Friends when they have plundered and betrayed them: From which baſe and pitiful Temper many monſtrous Cruelties have been tranſacted by Men, who have ſometimes carried their Modeſty ſo far as to the Murther, or utter Ruin of thoſe againſt whom their Conſciences have ſuggeſted to them, that they have committed ſome ſmall Treſpaſs

Treſpaſs, either by the debauching a Wife or Daughter, belying or betraying, or ſome other ſuch trifling Inſtance. In our Hero there was nothing not truly GREAT: He could, without the leaſt Abaſhment, drink a Bottle with the Man who knew he had the Moment before picked his Pocket; and, when he had ſtript him of every thing he had, never deſired to do him any farther Miſchief; for he carried Good-nature to that wonderful and uncommon Height, that he never did a ſingle Injury to Man or Woman, by which he himſelf did not expect to reap ſome Advantage.

OUR Hero found the captive Count not baſely lamenting his Fate, nor abandoning himſelf to Deſpair, but, with due Reſignation, employing himſelf in preparing ſeveral Packs of Cards for future Exploits. The Count, little ſuſpecting that Wild had been the ſole Contriver of the Misfortune which had befallen him, roſe up, and eagerly embraced him; and Wild, who well knew the whole, returned his Embrace with equal Warmth. They were no no ſooner ſeated than Wild took an Occaſion, from ſeeing the Cards lying on the Table, to inveigh againſt Gaming, and, with an uſual and highly commendable Freedom, after firſt exaggerating the diſtreſt Circumſtances in which the Count was then involved, imputed all his Misfortunes to that curſed Itch of Play, which he ſaid, he concluded had brought his preſent Confinement upon him, and muſt unavoidably end in his Deſtruction. The other, with great Alacrity, defended his favourite Amuſement (or rather Employment) and having told him the great Succeſs he had after his unluckily quitting the Room, acquainted him with the Accident which followed, and which the Reader, as well as Mr. Wild, hath had ſome Intimation of before; adding, however, one Circumſtance not hitherto mentioned, viz. that he had defended his Money with the utmoſt Bravery, and had dangerouſly wounded at leaſt two of the three Men who had attacked him. This Behaviour Wild, who not only knew the extreme Readineſs with which the Booty had been delivered, but alſo the conſtant Frigi-dity of the Count's Courage, highly applauded, and wiſhed he had been preſent to aſſiſt him. The Count then proceeded to animadvert on the Careleſneſs of the Watch, and the Scandal it was to the Laws, that People could not walk the Streets in Safety, and, after expatiating ſome Time on that Subject, he aſked Mr. Wild if he ever ſaw ſo prodigious a Run of Luck (for ſo he choſe to call his Winning, though he knew Wild was well acquainted with his having loaded Dice in his Pocket) the other anſwered, it was indeed prodigious, and almoſt ſufficient to juſtify any Perſon, who did not know him better, in ſuſpecting his fair Play. No Man, I believe, dares call that in Queſtion, replied he. No ſurely, ſays Wild, you are well known to be a Man of more Honour: But pray, Sir, continued he, did the Raſcals rob you of all? Every Shilling, cries the other with an Oath; they did not leave me a ſingle Stake.

While they were thus diſcourſing, Mr. Snap, with a Gentleman who followed him, introduced Mr. Bagſhot into the Company. It ſeems Mr. Bagſhot, immediately after after his Separation from Mr. Wild, returned to the Gaming-Table, where, he having truſted to Fortune that Treaſure which he had procured by his Induſtry, the faithleſs Goddeſs committed a Breach of Truſt, and ſent Mr. Bagſhot away with as empty Pockets as are to be found in any laced Coat in the Kingdom. Now as that Gentleman was walking to a certain reputable Houſe or Shed in Covent-Garden Market, he fortuned to meet with Mr. Snap, who had juſt returned from conveying the Count to his Lodgings, and was then walking to and fro before the Gaming-Houſe Door; for you are to know, my good Reader, if you have never been a Man of Wit and Pleaſure about Town, that as the voracious Pike lieth ſnug under ſome Weed before the Mouth of any of thoſe little Streams which diſcharge themſelves into a large River, waiting for the ſmall Fry which iſſue thereout; ſo hourly before the Door or Mouth of theſe Gaming-Houſes doth Mr. Snap, or ſome other Gentleman of his Occupation, attend the iſſuing forth of the ſmall Fry of young Gentlemen, to whom they deliver little Slips of Parchment, containing Invitations of the ſaid Gentlemen to their Houſes, together with one Mr. John Doe, a Perſon whoſe Company is in great Requeſt. Mr. Snap, among many others of theſe Billets, happened to have one directed to Mr. Bagſhot, being at the Suit or Solicitation of one Mrs. Anne Sample, Spinſter, at whoſe Houſe the ſaid Bagſhot had lodged ſeveral Months, and whence he had inadvertently departed without taking a formal Leave; on which Account Mrs. Anne had taken this Method of ſpeaking with him.

Mr. Snap's Houſe being now very full of good Company, he was obliged to introduce Mr. Bagſhot into the Count's Apartment, it being, as he ſaid, the only Chamber he had to lock up in. Mr. Wild no ſooner ſaw his Friend than he ran to embrace him, and immediately preſented him to the Count, who received him with great Civility.

Further Particulars relating to Miſs Tiſhy, which perhaps may not greatly ſurprize after the former. The Deſcription of a very fine Gentleman. And a Dialogue between Wild and the Count, in which public Virtue is juſt hinted at, with &c.

MR. Snap had turned the Key a very few Minutes before a Servant of the Family called Mr. Bagſhot out of the Room, telling him, there was a Perſon below who deſired to ſpeak with him; and this was no other than Miſs Lætitia Snap, whoſe Admirer Mr. Bagſhot had long been, and in whoſe tender Breaſt his Paſſion had raiſed a more ardent Flame than that of any of his Rivals had been able to raiſe. Indeed ſhe was ſo extremely fond of this Youth, that ſhe often confeſſed to her female Confidents, if ſhe could ever have liſtened to the Thought of living with any one Man, Mr. Bagſhot was he. Nor was ſhe ſingular in this Inclination, many other young Ladies being her Rivals in this Lover, who had all the great and noble Qualifications neceſſary to form a true Gallant, and which Nature is ſeldom ſo extremely bountiful as to indulge to any one Perſon. We will endeavour, however, to deſcribe them all with as much Exactneſs as poſſible. He was then ſix Feet high, had large Calves, broad Shoulders, a ruddy Complexion, with brown curled Hair, a modeſt Aſſurance, and clean Linen. He had indeed, it muſt be confeſt, ſome ſmall Deficiencies to counterbalance theſe heroic Qualities, for he was the ſillieſt Fellow in the World, could neither write nor read, nor had he a ſingle Grain or Spark of Honour, Honeſty, or Good-nature in his whole Compoſition.

As ſoon as Mr. Bagſhot had quitted the Room, the Count, taking Wild by the Hand, told him he had ſomething to communicate to him of very great Importance; he then proceeded to inform him, he was very well convinced that Bagſhot was the Perſon

Perſon who robbed him. Wild ſtarted with great ſeeming Amazement at this Diſcovery, and told the Count with a moſt ſerious Countenance, he adviſed him to take Care how he caſt any ſuch Reflections on a Man of Mr. Bagſhot's nice Honour; for he was certain he would not bear it. D—n his Honour, quoth the enraged Count, nor can I bear being robbed; I will apply to a Juſtice of Peace. Wild replied with great Indignation, ſince he durſt entertain ſuch a Suſpicion againſt his Friend, he would henceforth diſclaim all Acquaintance with him; that he knew Mr. Bagſhot was a Man of Honour, and his Friend, and conſequently it was impoſſible he ſhould be guilty of a bad Action; with much more to the ſame purpoſe, which had not the expected Weight with the Count; for the latter ſeemed ſtill certain as to the Perſon, and reſolute in applying for Juſtice, which, he ſaid, he thought he owed to the Public, as well as to himſelf. Wild then changed his Countenance into a kind of Deriſion, and ſpoke as follows: "Suppoſe it ſhould be poſſible "that Mr. Bagſhot had, in a Frolic, "(for I will call it no other) taken this

THEY were now informed that Dinner was ready, and the Company aſſembled below Stairs, whither the Reader may, if he pleaſe, attend theſe Gentlemen.

THERE ſat down at the Table Mr. Snap, and the two young Ladies his Daughters, Mr.

Mr. Wild the elder, Mr. Wild the younger, the Count, Mr. Bagſhot, and a grave Gentleman, who had formerly had the Honour of carrying Arms in a Regiment of Foot, and now engaged in the Office (perhaps a more reputable one) of aſſiſting or following Mr. Snap in the Execution of the Laws of his Country.

NOTHING very remarkable paſſed at Dinner. The Converſation (as is uſual in polite Company) rolled chiefly on what they were then eating, and what they had lately eaten. In which the military Gentleman, who had ſerved in Ireland, gave them a very particular Account of a new manner of roaſting Potatoes, and others gave an Account of other Diſhes. In ſhort, an indifferent By-ſtander would have concluded from their Diſcourſe, that they had all come into this World for no other purpoſe, than to fill their Bellies; and indeed if this was not the chief, it is probable it was the moſt innocent Deſign Nature had in their Formation.

As

As ſoon as the Diſh was removed, and the Ladies retired, the Count propoſed a Game at Hazard, which was immediately aſſented to by the whole Company, and the Dice being immediately brought in, the Count took up the Box, and demanded who would ſet him: To which no one made any Anſwer, imagining perhaps the Count's Pockets to be more empty than they were; for, in Reality, that Gentleman (notwithſtanding what he had heartily ſwore to Mr. Wild) had ſince his Arrival at Mr. Snap's, conveyed a Piece of Plate to pawn, by which Means he had furniſhed himſelf with ten Guineas. The Count, therefore, perceiving this Backwardneſs in his Friends, and probably ſomewhat gueſſing at the Cauſe of it, took the ſaid Guineas out of his Pocket, and threw them on the Table; when lo! (ſuch is the Force of Example) all the reſt began to produce their Funds, and immediately a conſiderable Sum glittering in their Eyes, the Game began.

CHAP. XIII.

A Chapter, of which we are extremely vain, and which indeed we look on as our Chef d'Oeuvre, containing a wonderful Story concerning the Devil, and as nice a Scene of Honour as ever happened.

MY Reader, I believe, even if he be a Gameſter, would not thank me for an exact Relation of every Man's Succeſs; let it ſuffice then that they played till the whole Money vaniſhed from the Table; and whether the Devil himſelf carried it away, I will not determine; but very ſurprizing it was, that every Perſon proteſted he had loſt, nor could any one gueſs who, but the Devil, had won.

BUT though very probable it is, that this Arch-Fiend had ſome Share in the Booty, it is likely he had not all; Mr. Bagſhot being imagined to be a conſiderable Winner, notwith-notwithſtanding his Aſſertions to the contrary; for he was ſeen by ſeveral to convey Money often into his Pocket, and what is ſtill a little ſtronger Preſumption is, that the grave Gentleman whom we have mentioned to have ſerved his Country in two honourable Capacities, not being willing to truſt alone to the Evidence of his Eyes, had frequently dived into the ſaid Bagſhot's Pocket, whence tho' he might extract a few Pieces, he was very ſenſible he had left many behind.

THE Gentleman had long indulged his Curioſity in this Way before Mr. Bagſhot, in the Heat of Gaming, had perceived him: But as he was now leaving off Play, he diſcovered this ingenious Feat of Dexterity; upon which, leaping up from his Chair in a violent Paſſion, he cried out, "I thought "I had been among Gentlemen, and Men "of Honour, but, d—— n me, I find we "have a Pickpocket in Company." The ſcandalous Sound of this Word extremely alarmed the whole Board, nor did they all ſhew leſs Surprize than the Conv——n (whoſe not ſitting of late is much lamented) would would expreſs at hearing there was an Atheiſt in the Room: But it more particularly affected the Gentleman; who likewiſe ſtarted from his Chair, and with a fierce Countenance and Accent, ſaid, "Do you "mean Me? D——n your Eyes, you are "a Raſcal and a Scoundrel." Thoſe Words would have been immediately ſucceeded by Blows, had not the Company interpoſed, and with ſtrong Arm witheld the two Antagoniſts from each other. It was, however, a long Time before they could be prevailed on to ſit down, which being at laſt happily brought about, Mr. Wild the elder, who was a well diſpoſed old Man, adviſed them to ſhake Hands and be Friends; but the Gentleman, who had received the firſt Affront, abſolutely refuſed it, and ſwore, He would have the Villain's Blood. Mr. Snap highly applauded the Reſolution, and affirmed that the Affront was by no Means to be put up by any who bore the Name of a Gentleman, and that unleſs his Friend reſented it properly, he would never execute another Warrant in his Company; that he had always looked upon him as a Man of Honour, and doubted not not but he would prove himſelf ſo; and that if it was his own Caſe, nothing ſhould perſuade him to put up ſuch an Affront without proper Satisfaction. The Count likewiſe ſpoke on the ſame Side, and the Parties themſelves muttered ſeveral ſhort Sentences, purporting their Intentions. At laſt, Mr. Wild our Hero, riſing ſlowly from his Seat, and having fixed the Attention of all preſent, began as follows.

" I have heard, with infinite Pleaſure, every " Thing which the two Gentlemen who " ſpoke laſt have ſaid, with Relation to " Honour, nor can any Man poſſibly en- " tertain a higher and nobler Senſe of that " Word, nor a greater Eſteem of its ineſti- " mable Value than myſelf. If we have " no Name to expreſs it by in our Cant " Dictionary, it were well to be wiſhed " we had. It is indeed, the eſſential Qua- " lity of a Gentleman, and which no Man " who ever was great in the Field, or on " the Road (as others expreſs it) can poſſi- " bly be without. But alas! Gentlemen, " What Pity is it, that a Word of ſuch " ſovereign Uſe and Virtue ſhould have ſo " uncertain and various an Application, " that

" repair this oblique Injury by directly af-

" Honour." The Gentleman anſwered, he was content to refer it to Mr. Wild, and whatever Satisfaction he thought ſufficient, he would accept. Let him give me my Money again firſt, ſaid Bagſhot, and then I will call him a Man of Honour with all my Heart. The Gentleman then proteſted he had not any, which Snap ſeconded, declaring he had his Eyes on him all the while; but Bagſhot remained ſtill unſatisfied, till Wild, rapping out a hearty Oath, ſwore he had not taken a ſingle Farthing, adding that whoever aſſerted the contrary gave him the Lie, and he would reſent it. And now, ſuch was the Aſcendency of this GREAT MAN, that Bagſhot immediately acquieſced, and performed the Ceremonies required: And thus, by the exquiſite Addreſs of our Hero, this Quarrel, which had ſo fatal an Aſpect, and which between two Perſons ſo extremely jealous of their Honour, would moſt certainly have produced very dreadful Conſequences, was happily concluded.

MR. Wild was indeed a little intereſted in this Affair, as he himſelf had ſet the Gentleman to work, and had received the greateſt Part of the Booty, and as to Mr. Snap's Depoſition in his Favour, it was the uſual Height to which the Ardour of that worthy Perſon's Friendſhip too frequently hurried him. It was his conſtant Maxim, That he was a pitiful Fellow who would ſtick at a little * Rapping for his Friend.

MATTERS being thus reconciled, and the gaming over, from Reaſons before hinted, the Company proceeded to drink about with the utmoſt Chearfulneſs and Friendſhip, drinking Healths, ſhaking Hands, and profeſſing the moſt perfect Affection for each other. ſigns which they then agitated in their Minds, and which they intended to execute as ſoon as the Liquor had prevailed over ſome of their Underſtandings. Bagſhot and the Gentleman intending to rob each other; Mr. Snap and Mr. Wild the elder, meditating what other Creditors they could find out, to charge the Gentlemen then in Cuſtody with; the Count hoping to renew the Play, and Wild our Hero, laying a Deſign to put Bagſhot out of the Way, or as the Vulgar expreſs it, to hang him with the firſt Opportunity. But none of theſe great Deſigns could at preſent be put in Execution, for Mr. Snap being ſoon after ſummoned abroad on Buſineſs of great Moment, which required likewiſe the Aſſiſtance of Mr. Wild the elder and his other Friend, and as he did not care to truſt to the Nimbleneſs of the Count's Heels, of which he had already had ſome Experience, he declared he muſt lock up for that Evening. And now, Reader, if thou pleaſeſt, as we are in no great Haſte, we will ſtop and make a Simile. As when their Lap is finiſhed, the cautious Huntſman to their Kennel gathers the nimble-footed footed Hounds, they with lank Ears and Tails ſlouch ſullenly on, whilſt he with his Whippers-in, follows cloſe at their Heels, regardleſs of their dogged Humour, till having ſeen them ſafe within the Door, he turns the Key, and then retires to whatever Buſineſs or Pleaſure calls him thence: So with louring Countenance, and reluctant Steps mounted the Count and Bagſhot to their Chamber, or rather Kennel, whither they were attended by Snap, and thoſe who followed him, and where Snap having ſeen them depoſited, very contentedly locked the Door and departed. And now, Reader, if you pleaſe we will, in Imitation of the truly laudable Cuſtom of the World, leave theſe our good Friends to deliver themſelves as they can, and purſue the thriving Fortunes of Wild our Hero, who with that great Averſion to Satisfaction and Content, which is inſeparably incident to GREAT Minds, began to enlarge his Views with his Proſperity: For this reſtleſs amiable Diſpoſition, this noble Avidity which encreaſes with Feeding, is the firſt Principle or conſtituent Quality of theſe our GREAT MEN, to whom, in their Paſſage on to Greatneſs, it happens as to a Traveller over the Alps, or if this be a too far fetched Simile, to one who travels over the Hills near Bath, were the Simile was indeed made. He ſees not the End of his Journey at once; but paſſing on from Scheme to Scheme, and from Hill to Hill, with noble Conſtancy, reſolving ſtill to attain the Summit on which he hath fixed his Eye, however dirty the Roads may be through which he ſtruggles, he at length arrives at —— ſome vile Inn, where he finds no Kind of Entertainment nor Conveniency for Repoſe. I fancy, Reader, if thou haſt ever travelled in theſe Roads, one Part of my Simile is ſufficiently apparent, (and indeed, in all theſe Illuſtrations one Side is generally much more apparent than the other) but believe me, if the other doth not ſo evidently appear to thy Satisfaction, it is from no other Reaſon than becauſe thou art unacquainted with theſe GREAT MEN, and haſt not had ſufficient Inſtruction, Leiſure, or Opportunity to conſider what happens to thoſe who purſue what is generally underſtood by GREATNESS: For ſurely if thou hadſt animadverted not only on the many Perils to

to which GREAT MEN are daily liable while they are in their Progreſs, but hadſt diſcerned as it were through a Microſcope (for it is inviſible to the naked Eye) that diminutive Speck of Happineſs which they attain even in the Conſummation of their Wiſhes, thou wouldſt lament with me, the unhappy Fate of theſe GREAT GENIUS's on whom Nature hath ſet ſo ſuperior a Mark, that the reſt of Mankind are born for their Uſe and Emolument only, and be apt to cry out, "It is Pity that THOSE for "whoſe Pleaſure and Profit Mankind are "to labour and ſweat, to be hacked and "hewed, to be pillaged, plundered, and "every Way deſtroyed, ſhould reap ſo "LITTLE Advantage from all the Miſeries "they occaſion to others." For my Part, I own myſelf of that humble Kind of Mortals who conſider themſelves born for the Behoof of ſome GREAT Man or other, and could I behold his Happineſs carved out of the Labour and Ruin of a thouſand ſuch Reptiles as myſelf, I might with Satisfaction exclaim, Sic, ſic juvat: But when I behold one GREAT MAN ſtarving with Hunger and freezing with Cold in the Midſt of fifty thouſand, who are ſuffering the ſame Evils for his Diverſion; when I ſee another whoſe own Mind is a more abject Slave to his own Greatneſs, and is more tortured and wrecked by it than thoſe of all his Vaſſals: Laſtly, when I conſider whole Nations extirpated only to bring Tears into the Eyes of a GREAT MAN, that he hath no more Nations to extirpate, then indeed I am almoſt inclined to wiſh that Nature had ſpared us this her MASTER-PIECE, and that no GREAT MAN had ever been born into the World.

BUT to proceed with our Hiſtory, which will, we hope, produce much better Leſſons and more inſtructive than any we can preach: Wild was no ſooner retired to a Night-Cellar, than he began to reflect on the Sweets he had that Day enjoyed from the Labours of others, viz. Firſt, from Mr. Bagſhot, who had for his Uſe robbed the Count; and Secondly, from the Gentleman, who for the ſame good Purpoſe had picked the Pocket of Bagſhot. He then proceeded to reaſon thus with himſelf. "The Art of Policy, is the Art of Mul-

HAVING thus pre-conceived his Scheme, he ſaw nothing wanting to put it in immediate Execution, but that which is indeed the Beginning as well as End of all human Devices: I mean Money. Of which Commodity he was poſſeſſed of no more than ſixty-five Guineas, being all that remained from the double Benefits he had made of Bagſhot, and which did not ſeem ſufficient to furniſh his Houſe, and every other Convenience neceſſary for ſo grand an Undertaking. He reſolved therefore to go immediately to the Gaming-Houſe, which was then ſitting, not ſo much with an Intention of truſting to Fortune, as to play the ſurer Card of attacking the Winner in his Way home. On his Arrival, however, he thought he might as well try his Succeſs at the Dice, and reſerve the other Recourſe as his laſt Expedient. He accordingly ſat down to play, and as Fortune no more than others of her Sex, is ob-obſerved to diſtribute her Favours with ſtrict Regard to great mental Endowments, ſo our Hero loſt every Farthing in his Pocket. He then reſolved to have immediate Recourſe to his ſurer Stratagem; and caſting his Eyes round the Room, he ſoon perceived a Gentleman ſitting in a diſconſolate Poſture, who ſeemed a proper Inſtrument or Tool for his Purpoſe. In ſhort (to be as conciſe as poſſible in theſe leaſt ſhining Parts of our Hiſtory) he accoſted him, ſounded him, found him fit to execute, propoſed the Matter, received a ready Aſſent, and having fixed on the Perſon who ſeemed that Evening the greateſt Favourite of Fortune, they poſted themſelves in the moſt proper Place to ſurprize the Enemy as he was retiring to his Quarters, where he was ſoon attacked, ſubdued and plundered, but indeed of no conſiderable Booty; for it ſeems this Gentleman played on a common Stock, and had depoſited his Winnings at the Scene of Action.

THIS was ſo cruel a Diſappointment to Wild, and ſo ſenſibly affects us, as no doubt it

Mr. JONATHAN WILD the Great.

CHAP. I.

Characters of ſilly People, with the proper Uſes for which ſuch are deſigned.

ONE Reaſon why we choſe to end our firſt Book as we did with the laſt Chapter, was that we are now obliged to produce two Characters of a Stamp entirely different from what we have hitherto dealt in. Theſe Perſons are of that pitiful Order of Mortals, who are are in Contempt called Good-natured; being indeed ſent into the World by Nature, with the ſame Deſign as Men put little Fiſh into a Pike-Pond, in order to be devoured by that voracious Water-Hero.

But to proceed with our Hiſtory, Wild having ſhared the Booty in much the ſame Manner as before, i. e. taken three Fourths of it, amounting to eighteen Pence, was now retiring to reſt, in no very happy Mood, when by Accident he met a young Fellow, who had formerly been his School-Fellow. This Perſon had a Regard for our Hero, as he had more than once, for a ſmall Reward, taken a Fault on himſelf, for which the other, who had more Regard for his Skin than Wild, was to have been whipp'd. He therefore accoſted Wild in the moſt friendly Manner, and invited him home with him to Breakfaſt, it being now near Nine in the Morning, which our Hero, with no great Difficulty conſented to. This young Man, who was about Wild's Age, had ſome Time before ſet up in the Trade of a Jeweller, in the Materials or Stock for which, he had laid out the greateſt Part of

of a little Fortune, and had married a very agreeable Woman for Love, by whom he then had two Children. As our Reader is to be more acquainted with this Perſon, it may not be improper to open ſomewhat of his Character, eſpecially as it will ſerve as a Kind of Foil to the noble and GREAT Diſpoſition of our Hero, and as the one ſeems ſent into this World as a proper Object on which the GREAT Talents of the other were to be diſplayed with a proper and juſt Succeſs.

MR. Thomas Heartfree then (for that was his Name) was of an honeſt and open Diſpoſition. He was of that Sort of Men, whom Experience only, and not their own Natures, muſt inform that there are ſuch things as Deceit and Hypocriſy in the World; and who, conſequently, are not at five and twenty as difficult to be impoſed upon as the oldeſt and moſt ſubtile. He was poſſeſſed of ſeveral great Weakneſſes of Mind; being good-natured, friendly, and generous to a great Exceſs. He had indeed too little Regard to common Juſtice, for he had forgiven ſome Debts to his Acquaintance, only becauſe they could not pay him; and had entruſted a Bankrupt on his ſetting up a ſecond time, from having been convinced, that he had dealt in his Bankruptcy with a fair and honeſt Heart, and that it was owing to Misfortune, and not to Neglect or Impoſture. He was withal ſo ſilly a Fellow that he never took the leaſt Advantage of the Ignorance of his Cuſtomers, and contented himſelf with very moderate Gains on his Goods; which he was the better enabled to do, notwithſtanding his Generoſity, becauſe his Life was extremely temperate, his Expences being ſolely confined to the cheerful Entertainment of his Friends at Home, and now and then a moderate Glaſs of Wine, in which he indulged himſelf in the Company of his Wife, who was a mean-ſpirited, poor, domeſtic, low-bred Animal, who confined herſelf moſtly to the Care of her Family, placed her Happineſs in her Huſband and her Children; followed no expenſive Faſhions or Diverſions, and indeed rarely went abroad, unleſs to return the Viſits of a few plain Neighbours, and twice a Year at fartheſt afforded herſelf in Company with her Huſband the Diverſion of a Play, where where ſhe never ſat in a higher Place than the Pit.

To this ſilly Woman did this ſilly Fellow introduce the GREAT WILD, informing her at the ſame Time of their former Acquaintance, and the Obligations he had received from him; for, as it often happens, that he who confers the Obligation, forgets the Price paid for it, ſo it ſometimes, but very ſeldom, falls out with him who receives it. This ſimple Woman no ſooner heard her Huſband had been obliged to her Gueſt, than her Eyes ſparkled on him with a Benevolence which is an Emanation from the Heart, and of which GREAT and NOBLE MINDS, whoſe Hearts never ſwell but with an Injury, can have no very adequate Idea; it is therefore no Wonder that our Hero ſhould miſconſtrue as he did, the poor, innocent, and ſimple Affection of Mrs. Heartfree towards her Huſband's Friend, for that great and generous Paſſion, which fires the Eyes of a modern Heroine, when the Colonel is ſo kind as to indulge his City Creditor with partaking of his Table to Day, and of his Bed to Morrow. Wild therefore inſtantly returned the Compliment, as he underſtood it, with his Eyes, and preſently after beſtowed many Encomiums on her Beauty, with which perhaps ſhe, who was a Woman, though a good one, and miſapprehended the Deſign, was not diſpleaſed any more than the Huſband.

When Breakfaſt was ended, and the Wife retired to her houſhold Affairs, Wild, who had a quick Diſcernment into the Weakneſſes of Men, and who, beſides the Knowledge of his good (or fooliſh) Diſpoſition when a Boy, had now diſcovered ſeveral Sparks of Goodneſs, Friendſhip, and Generoſity in his Friend, began to diſcourſe over the Accidents which had happened in their Childhood, and took frequent Occaſions of reminding him of thoſe Favours which we have before mentioned his having conferred on him; he then proceeded to the moſt vehement Profeſſion of Friendſhip, and to the moſt ardent Expreſſions of Joy in this Renewal of their Acquaintance. He at laſt told him with great ſeeming Pleaſure, that he believed he had an Opportunity tunity of ſerving him by the Recommendation of a Gentleman to his Cuſtom, who was then on the Brink of Marriage, and, if not already engaged, I will, ſays he, endeavour to prevail on him to furniſh his Lady with Jewels at your Shop.

HEARTFREE was not backward in Thanks to our Hero, and, after many earneſt Solicitations to Dinner, which were refuſed, they parted for the firſt Time.

BUT here, as it occurs to our Memory, that our Readers may be ſurprized (an Accident which ſometimes happens in Hiſtories of this kind) how Mr. Wild the elder, in his preſent Capacity, ſhould have been able to maintain his Son at a reputable School, as this appears to have been, it may be neceſſary to inform him, that Mr. Wild himſelf was then a Tradeſman in good Buſineſs; but, by Misfortunes in the World, to wit, Extravagance and Gaming, he had reduced himſelf to that honourable Occupation which we have formerly mentioned.

HAVING cleared up this Doubt, we will now purſue our Hero, who forthwith repaired to the Count, and having firſt ſettled preliminary Articles concerning Diſtributions, he acquainted him with the Scheme which he had formed againſt Heartfree; and after conſulting proper Methods to put it in Execution, they began to concert Meaſures for the Enlargement of the Count; on which the firſt and indeed only Point to be conſidered, was to raiſe Money, not to pay his Debts, for that would have required an immenſe Sum, and was contrary to his Inclination, or Intention, but to procure him Bail; for as to his Eſcape, Mr. Snap had taken ſuch Precautions that it appeared abſolutely impoſſible.

CHAP. II.

Great Examples of GREATNESS in Wild, ſhewn as well by his Behaviour to Bagſhot, as in a Scheme laid firſt to impoſe on Heartfree by Means of the Count, and then to cheat the Count of the Booty.

WILD undertook, therefore, to extract ſome Money from Bagſhot, who, notwithſtanding the Depredations made on him, had carried off a pretty conſiderable Booty from their Engagement at Dice the preceding Day. He found Mr. Bagſhot in Expectation of his Bail, and, with a Countenance full of Concern, which he could at any Time, with wonderful Art, put on, told him, that all was diſcovered; that the Count knew him, and intended to proſecute him for the Robbery, had not I exerted, ſaid he, my utmoſt Intereſt, and with great Difficulty prevailed on him in Caſe you refund the Money — "Re- "fund the Money, cry'd Bagſhot, that is in

" and, to ſhew you how little Apprehen-
" ſion I have of your Power to hurt me,

" I will have you apprehended this Mo" ment." —— At which Words he offered to break from him; but Bagſhot laid hold of his Skirts, and, with an altered Tone and Manner, begged him not to be ſo impatient. " Refund then, Sirrah, cries " Wild, and perhaps I may take pity on " you. What muſt I refund, anſwered " Bagſhot: Every Farthing in your Pocket, " replied Wild; then I may have ſome Com-
" paſſion on you, and not only ſave your " Life, but, out of an Exceſs of Generoſi-
" ty, may return you ſomething." At which Words Bagſhot ſeeming to heſitate, Wild pretended to make to the Door, and rapt out an Oath of Vengeance with ſo violent an Emphaſis, that his Friend no longer preſumed to ballance, but ſuffered Wild to ſearch his Pockets, and draw forth all he found, to the Amount of twenty one Guineas and an half, which laſt Piece our generous Hero returned him again; telling him, he might now ſleep ſecure, but adviſed him for the future never to threaten his Friends.

THUS

Digitized by Google

THUS did our Hero execute the greateſt Exploits with the utmoſt Eaſe imaginable, by Means of thoſe tranſcendent Qualities which Nature had indulged him with, viz. a bold Heart, a thundering Voice, and a ſteddy Countenance.

WILD now returned to the Count, and informed him that he had got ten Guineas of Bagſhot; for with great and commendable Prudence, he ſunk the other eleven in his own Pocket; and told him with that Money he would procure him Bail, which he after prevailed on his Father and another Gentleman of the ſame Occupation to become for two Guineas each; ſo that he made lawful Prize of ſix more; for ſuch were his great Abilities, and ſo vaſt the Compaſs of his Underſtanding, that he never made any Bargain without over-reaching (or, in the vulgar Phraſe, cheating) the Perſon with whom he dealt.

THE Count being, by theſe Means, enlarged, the firſt thing they did, in order to procure Credit from Tradeſmen, was the taking taking a handſome Houſe ready furniſhed in one of the new Streets, in which, as ſoon as the Count was ſettled, they proceeded to furniſh him with Servants and Equipage, and all the Inſignia of a large Eſtate proper to impoſe on poor Heartfree. Theſe being all obtained, Wild made a ſecond Viſit to his Friend, and, with much Joy in his Countenance, acquainted him that he had ſucceeded in his Endeavours, and that the Gentleman had promiſed to deal with him for the Jewels which he intended to preſent his Bride, and which were deſigned to be very ſplendid and coſtly; he therefore appointed him to go to the Count the next Morning, and bring with him a Set of the richeſt and moſt beautiful Jewels he had, giving him at the ſame Time ſome Hints of the Count's Ignorance of that Commodity, and that he might extort what Price of him he pleaſed; but Heartfree told him, not without ſome Diſdain, that he ſcorned to take any ſuch Advantage; and, after expreſſing much Gratitude to his Friend for his Recommendation, he promiſed to carry the Jewels at the Hour, and to the Place appointed.

Digitized by Google

I AM ſenſible that the Reader, if he hath but the leaſt Notion of GREATNESS, muſt have ſuch a Contempt for the extreme Folly of this Fellow, that he will be very little concerned at any Misfortunes which befal him in the ſequel; for, to have no Suſpicion that an old School-fellow, with whom he had, in his tendereſt Years, contracted a Friendſhip, and who, on the accidental renewing their Acquaintance, had profeſſed the moſt paſſionate Regard for him, ſhould be very ready to impoſe on him; in ſhort, to conceive that a Friend ſhould, of his own Accord, without any View to his own Intereſt, endeavour to do him a Service; muſt argue ſuch Weakneſs of Mind, ſuch Ignorance of the World, and ſuch an artleſs, ſimple, undeſigning Heart, as muſt render the Perſon poſſeſſed of it the loweſt Creature, and the propereſt Object of Contempt imaginable, in the Eyes of every Man of Underſtanding and Diſcernment.

Wild remembered that his Friend Heartfree's Faults were rather in his Heart than his

his Head; that tho' he was an abject mean Fellow, and never capable of laying a Deſign to injure any human Creature, yet was he by no Means a Fool, nor liable to any groſs Impoſition, unleſs where his Heart betrayed him. He therefore inſtructed the Count to take only one of his Jewels at the firſt Interview, and to reject the reſt as not fine enough, and order him to provide ſome richer. He ſaid, this Management would prevent Heartfree from expecting ready Money for the Jewel he brought with him, which the Count was preſently to diſpoſe of, and by Means of that Money, and his great Abilities at Cards and Dice, to get together as large a Sum as poſſible, which he was to pay down to Heartfree at the Delivery of the Set of Jewels, who would be thus void of all manner of Suſpicion, and would not fail to give him Credit for the reſidue.

By this Contrivance it will appear in the ſequel, that Wild did not only propoſe to make the Impoſition on Heartfree, who was (hitherto) void of all Suſpicion, but to rob the Count himſelf of this Sum; this double Method of cheating the very Tools who

who are their Inſtruments to cheat others, is the ſuperlative Degree of GREATNESS, and is probably, as far as any Spirit cruſted over with Clay can carry it, falling very little ſhort of Dæmoniſm itſelf.

THIS Method was immediately put in Execution, and the Count, the firſt Day, took only a ſingle Brilliant, worth about five hundred Pounds, and ordered a Neck-lace, Ear-rings, and Solitaire of the Value of four thouſand Pounds, to be prepared by that Day Seven-night.

THIS Interval was employed by Wild in proſecuting his Scheme of raiſing a Gang, in which he met with ſuch Succeſs, that within a few Days he had levied ſeven bold and reſolute Fellows, fit for any Enterprize, how dangerous or GREAT, i. e. villainous ſoever.

WE have before remarked, that the trueſt Mark of GREATNESS is Inſatiability. Wild had covenanted with the Count to receive three-fourths of the Booty, and had, at the ſame time, covenanted with himſelf, himſelf to ſecure the other fourth Part likewiſe, for which he had formed a very GREAT and noble Deſign; but he now ſaw with Concern, that Sum, which was to be received in Hand by Heartfree, in Danger of being abſolutely loſt. In order, therefore, to poſſeſs himſelf of that likewiſe, he contrived, that the Jewels ſhould be brought in the Afternoon, and that Heartfree ſhould be detained before the Count could ſee him; that the Night ſhould overtake him in his Return, where two of his Gang were ordered to attack and plunder him.

CHAP. III.

THE Count had diſpoſed of his Jewel for four hundred Pounds, which he had, by Dexterity, raiſed to a thouſand Pounds; and that Sum he paid down to Heartfree, promiſing him the reſt within a Month. His Houſe, his Equipage, his Appearance, but, above all, a certain Plauſibility in his Voice and Behaviour would have deceived any but one whoſe GREAT and wiſe Heart had dictated to him ſomething within, which would have ſecured him from any Danger of Impoſition. Heartfree therefore did not in the leaſt ſcruple giving him Credit, but as he had, in Reality, procured thoſe Jewels of another, his own little Stock not being able to furniſh any thing ſo valuable, he begged the Count would be ſo kind to give his Note for the Money, payable at the time he mentioned, which that Gentleman did not in the leaſt ſcruple; ſo he paid him the thouſand Pound in Specie, and gave his Note for four thouſand five hundred Pounds more to Heartfree, who burnt with Gratitude to Wild, for the noble Cuſtomer he had recommended to him.

As ſoon as Heartfree was departed, Wild, who waited in another Room, came in, and received the Caſket from the Count, it having been agreed between them, that it ſhould be depoſited in his Hands,

Hands, as he was the original Contriver of the Scheme, and was to have the largeſt Share. Wild having recived the Caſket, offered to meet the Count late that Evening to come to a Diviſion; but ſuch was the latter's Confidence in the Honour of our Hero, that, he ſaid, if it was any Inconvenience to him, the next Morning would do altogether as well. This was more agreeable to Wild, and accordingly an Appointment being made for that purpoſe, he ſet out in haſte to purſue Heartfree to the Place where the two Gentlemen were ordered to meet and attack him. Thoſe Gentlemen, with noble Reſolution, executed their Purpoſe; they attacked and ſpoiled the Enemy of the whole Sum he had received from the Count.

As ſoon as the Engagement was over and Heartfree left ſprawling on the Ground, our Hero, who wiſely declined truſting the Booty in his Friends Hands, tho' he had good Experience of their Honour, made off after the Conquerors; at length they being all at a Place of Safety, Wild, according to a previous Agreement, received nine Tenths of the Booty; the ſubordinate Heroes did indeed profeſs ſome little unwillingneſs (perhaps more than was ſtrictly conſiſtent with Honour) to perform their Contract; but Wild, partly by Argument, but more by Oaths and Threatnings, prevailed with them to fulfil their Promiſe.

OUR Hero having thus with wonderful Addreſs brought this GREAT and glorious Action to a happy Concluſion, reſolved to relax his Mind after his Fatigue, in the Converſation of the Fair. He therefore ſet forwards to his lovely Lætitia; but in his Way, accidentally met with a young Lady of his Acquaintance, Miſs Molly Straddle, who was taking the Air in Bridges-Street. Miſs Molly ſeeing Mr. Wild, ſtopp'd him, and with a Familiarity peculiar to a genteel Town Education, tapp'd or rather ſlapp'd him on the Back, and aſked him to treat her with a Pint of Wine, at a neighbouring Tavern. The Hero, tho' he loved the chaſte Lætitia with exceſſive Tenderneſs, was not of that low ſniveling Breed of Mortals who, as it is generally expreſſed, tie themſelves to a Woman's man's Apron-Strings; in a Word, who are tainted with that mean, baſe, low Vice, of Conſtancy; he therefore immediately conſented, and attended her to a Tavern famous for excellent Wine, known by the Name of the Rummer and Horſhoe, where they retired to a Room by themſelves. Wild was very vehement in his Addreſſes, but to no Purpoſe; the young Lady declared ſhe would grant no Favour till he had made her a Preſent; this was immediately complied with, and the Lover made as happy as he could deſire.

THE immoderate Fondneſs which Wild entertained for his dear Lætitia, would not ſuffer him to waſte any conſiderable Time with Miſs Straddle. Notwithſtanding, therefore, of all the Endearments and Careſſes of that young Lady, he ſoon made an Excuſe to go down Stairs, and thence immediately ſet forward to Lætitia, without taking any formal Leave of Miſs Straddle, or indeed of the Drawer, with whom the Lady was afterwards obliged to come to an Account for the Reckoning.

Mr. Wild, on his Arrival at Mr. Snap's, found only Miſs Tiſhy at home; that young Lady being employed alone, in Imitation of Penelope, with her Thread or Worſted; only with this Difference, that whereas Penelope unravelled by Night what ſhe had knit, or wove, or ſpun by Day, ſo what our young Heroine unravelled by Day, ſhe knit again by Night. In ſhort, ſhe was mending a Pair of blue Stockings with red Clocks; a Circumſtance which, perhaps, we might have omitted, had it not ſerved to ſhew that there are ſtill ſome Ladies of this Age, who imitate the Simplicity of the Ancients.

Wild immediately aſked for his Beloved, and was informed, that ſhe was not at Home. He then enquired, where ſhe was to be found, and declared, he would not depart till he had ſeen her; nay, not till he had married her; for, indeed, his Paſſion for her was truly honourable. in other Words, he had ſo ungovernable a Deſire for her Perſon, that he would go any Lengths to ſatisfy it. He then pulled out out the Casket, which he ſwore was full of the fineſt Jewels, and that he would give them all to her, with other Promiſes; which ſo prevailed on Miſs Doſhy, who had not the common Failure of Siſters in envying, and often endeavouring to diſappoint each other's Happineſs; that ſhe deſired Mr. Wild to ſit down a few Minutes, whilſt ſhe endeavoured to find her Siſter, and to bring her to him. The Lover thanked her, and promiſed to ſtay till her Return; and Miſs Doſhy, leaving Mr. Wild to his Meditations, faſtened him in the Kitchen by barring the Door (for moſt of the Doors in this Manſion were made to be bolted on the outſide) and then ſlapping to the Door of the Houſe with great Violence, without going out at it, ſhe ſtole ſoftly up Stairs, where Miſs Lætitia was engaged in cloſe Conference with Mr. Bagſhot. Miſs Letty, being informed by her Siſter in a Whiſper of what Mr. Wild had ſaid, and what he had produced, told Mr. Bagſhot, that a young Lady was below to viſit her, whom ſhe would diſpatch with all imaginable Haſte, and return to him. She deſired him therefore to ſtay with Patience for her in the mean Time, and that ſhe would leave the Door unlocked, tho' her Papa would never forgive her if he ſhould diſcover it. Bagſhot promiſed on his Honour, not to ſtep without his Chamber; and the two young Ladies went ſoftly down Stairs; when pretending firſt to make their Entry into the Houſe, they repaired to the Kitchen, where not even the Preſence of the chaſte Lætitia could reſtore that Harmony to the Countenance of her Lover, which Miſs Theodoſia had left him poſſeſſed of; for during her Abſence he had diſcovered the Abſence of that Purſe which had been taken from Mr. Heartfree, and which, indeed, Miſs Straddle had in the Warmth of his amorous Careſſes, unperceived, drawn from him. However, as he had that perfect Maſtery of his Temper, or rather of his Muſcles, which is as neceſſary to form a GREAT Character as to perſonate it on the Stage, he ſoon conveyed a Smile into his Countenance, and concealing as well his Misfortune as his Chagrin at it, began to pay honourable Addreſſes to Miſs Letty. This young Lady, amongſt many other good Ingredients, had three very predominant Paſſions, to wit, Vanity, Vanity, Wantonneſs, and Avarice. To ſatisfy the firſt of theſe, ſhe applied Mr. Smith and Comp. to the ſecond, Mr. Bagſhot and Comp. and our Hero had the Honour and Happineſs of ſolely engroſſing the third. Now, theſe three Sorts of Lovers ſhe had very different Ways of entertaining. With the firſt, ſhe was all gay and coquette; with the ſecond, all fond and rampant; and with the laſt, all cold and reſerved. She, therefore, told Mr. Wild, with a moſt compoſed Aſpect, that ſhe was glad he had repented of his Manner of treating her at their laſt Interview, where his Behaviour was ſo monſtrous, that ſhe had reſolved never to ſee him any more; that ſhe was afraid her own Sex would hardly pardon her the Weakneſs ſhe was guilty of in receding from that Reſolution, which ſhe was perſuaded ſhe never ſhould have prevailed with herſelf to do, had not her Siſter, who was there to confirm what ſhe ſaid, (as ſhe did with many Oaths) betrayed her into his Company, by pretending it was another Perſon to viſit her: But however, as he now thought proper to give her more convincing Proofs of his Affection (for he had now the Casket in his Hand) and ſince ſhe perceived his Deſigns were no longer againſt her Virtue, but were ſuch as a Woman of Honour might liſten to, ſhe muſt own —— and then ſhe feign'd an Heſitation, when Theodoſia began. "Nay, "Siſter, I am reſolved you ſhall counter- "feit no longer. I aſſure you, Mr. Wild, "ſhe hath the moſt violent Paſſion for "you in the World; and if you offer to "go back, ſince I plainly ſee Mr. Wild's "Deſigns are honourable, I will betray all "you have ever ſaid. —How, Siſter, (an- "ſwered Lætitia) I proteſt you will drive "me out of the Room: I did not expect "this Uſage from you." Wild then fell on his Knees, and taking hold of her Hand, repeated a Speech which, as the Reader may eaſily ſuggeſt it to himſelf, I ſhall not here minutely ſet down. He then offered her the Casket, but ſhe gently rejected it; and on a ſecond Offer, with a modeſt Countenance and Voice, deſired to know what it contained. Wild then open'd it, and took forth, (with Sorrow I write it, and with Sorrow will it be read) one of thoſe beautiful Necklaces, with which at the Fair of Bartholomew, they deck the well whitened Neck of Thaleſtris Queen of the Amazons, Anna Bullen, Queen Elizabeth, or ſome other High Princeſs in Drollic Story. It was indeed compoſed of that Paſte, which Derdæus Magnus, an ingenious Toyman, doth at a very moderate Price diſpoſe of to the ſecond Rate Beaus of the Metropolis. For, to open a Truth, which we ask our Reader's Pardon for having concealed from him ſo long; the ſagacious Count, wiſely fearing, leſt ſome Accident might prevent Mr. Wild's Return at the appointed Time, had carefully conveyed the Jewels which Mr. Heartfree had brought with him, into his own Pocket; and in their Stead had placed in the Casket theſe artificial Stones, which, tho' of equal Value to a Philoſopher, and perhaps of a much greater to a true Admirer of the Compoſitions of Art, had not however the ſame Charms in the Eyes of Miſs Letty; who had indeed ſome Knowledge of Jewels: For Mr. Snap, with great Reaſon conſidering how valuable a Part of a young Lady's Education it would be to have his Daughter inſtructed in theſe Things, in an Age

Age when young Ladies learn little more than how to dreſs themſelves, had in her youth, placed Miſs Letty as the Hand-maid (or Houſe-maid, as the Vulgar call it) of an eminent Pawn-broker. The lightning, therefore, which ſhould have flaſhed from the Jewels, flaſhed from her Eyes, and thunder immediately followed from her Voice. She be-knaved, be-raſcalled, be-rogued the unhappy Hero, who ſtood ſilent, confounded with Aſtoniſhment, but more with Shame and Indignation, at being thus out-witted and over-reached. At length, he recovered his Spirits, and throwing down the Casket in a Rage, he ſnatched the Key from the Table; and without making any Anſwer to the Ladies, who both very plentifully open'd upon him, or taking any leave of them, he flew out at the Door, and repaired with the utmoſt Expedition to the Count's Habitation.

In which Wild, after many fruitleſs Endeavours to diſcover his Friend, moralizes on his Misfortune in a Speech, which may be of Uſe (if rightly underſtood) to ſome other conſiderable Speech-Makers.

NOT the higheſt-fed Footman of the higheſt-bred Woman of Quality knocks with more Impetuoſity, than Wild did at the Count's Door, which was immediately opened by a well-dreſt Livery Man, who anſwered, his Maſter was not at Home. Wild, not ſatisfied with this, ſearched the Houſe, but to no purpoſe; he then ranſacked all the Gaming-Houſes in Town, but found no Count: Indeed that Gentleman had taken Leave of his Houſe the ſame Inſtant Mr. Wild had turned his Back, and, equipping himſelf with Boots and a Poſt-horſe, without taking with him either Servant, Clothes, or any Neceſſaries, for the Journey of a great Man, made ſuch

WILD, finding his Search ineffectual, reſolved to give it over for that Night; he then retired to his Seat of Contemplation, a Night-Cellar, where, without a ſingle Farthing in his Pocket, he called for a Sneaker of Punch, and, placing himſelf on a Bench by himſelf, he ſoftly vented the following Soliloquy:

" How vain is human GREATNESS!

His Soliloquy and his Punch concluded together; for he had at every Pauſe comforted himſelf with a Sip. And now it came firſt into his Head, that it would be more difficult to pay for it, than it was to ſwallow it, when, to his great Pleaſure, he beheld, at another Corner of the Room, one of the Gentlemen whom he had employed in the Attack on Heartfree, and who, he doubted not, would readily lend him a Guinea or two; but he had the Mortification, on applying to him, to hear that the Gaming-Table had ſtript him of all the Booty which his own Generoſity had left in his Poſſeſſion. He was therefore obliged to purſue his uſual Method on ſuch Occaſions; ſo, cocking his Hat fiercely, he marched out of the Room without making any Excuſe, or any one daring to make the leaſt Demand.

WE will now leave our Hero to take a ſhort Repoſe, and return to Mr. Snap's, where, at Wild's Departure, the fair Theodoſia had again betaken herſelf to her Stocking, and Miſs Letty had retired up Stairs to Mr. Bagſhot; but that Gentleman had broken his Parole, and, having conveyed himſelf below Stairs behind a Door, he took the Opportunity of Wild's Sally to make his Eſcape. We ſhall only obſerve, that Miſs Letty's Surprize was the greater, as ſhe had, notwithſtanding her Promiſe to the contrary, taken the Precaution to turn the Key; but, in her Hurry, ſhe did it ineffectually. How wretched muſt have been the Situation of this young Creature, who had not only loſt a Lover, on whom ſhe perfectly doated, but was expoſed to the Rage of an injured Father, tenderly jealous of his Honour, which was deeply engaged to the Sheriff of London and Middlesex, for the safe Custody of the said Bagshot, and for which two very good responsible Friends had given not only their Words but their Bonds.

But let us remove our Eyes from this melancholy Object, and survey our Hero, who, after a successless Search for Miss Straddle, with wonderful Greatness of Mind, and Steddiness of Countenance, went early in the Morning to visit his Friend Heartfree, at a Time when the common Herd of Friends would have forsaken and avoided him. He entered the Room with a chearful Air, which he presently changed into Surprize on seeing his Friend in a Night-Gown, with his wounded Head bound about with Linen, and looking extremely pale from a great Profusion of Blood. When Wild was informed by Heartfree what had happened, he first expressed great Sorrow, and afterwards suffered as violent Agonies of Rage against the Robbers to burst from him. This latter, in Compassion to the deep Impressions his Misfor-

Misfortune ſeemed to make on his Friend, endeavoured to leſſen it as much as poſſible, at the ſame Time exaggerating the Obligation he owed to Wild, in which his Wife likewiſe ſeconded him; and they breakfaſted with more Comfort than was reaſonably to be expected after ſuch an Accident. Heart-free expreſſing great Satisfaction that he had put the four thouſand Pound Note in another Pocket-Book, adding, that ſuch a Loſs would have been fatal to him; "for, "to confeſs the Truth to you, my dear "Friend, ſaid he, I have had ſome Loſſes "lately, which have greatly perplexed my "Affairs, and though I have many Debts "due to me from People of great Faſhion, "I aſſure you I know not where to be cer-"tain of getting a Shilling." Wild greatly felicitated him on the lucky Accident of preſerving his Note, and then proceeded, with much Acrimony, to inveigh againſt the Barbarity of People of Faſhion, who kept Tradeſmen out of their Money.

WHILE they amuſed themſelves with Diſcourſes of this kind, Wild, meditating within himſelf whether he ſhould borrow or ſteal from his Friend, or indeed whether he could not effect both, the Apprentice brought a Bank-Note in to Heartfree, which, he ſaid, a Gentlewoman in the Shop, who had been looking at ſome Jewels, deſired him to exchange. Heartfree looking at the Back of it, immediately perceived the Count's Endorſement, and preſently recollected it to be one of thoſe he had been robbed of. With this Diſcovery he acquainted Wild, who, with the notable Preſence of Mind, and unchanged Complexion, ſo eſſential to a GREAT Character, adviſed him to proceed cautiouſly; and offered, (as Mr. Heartfree himſelf was, he ſaid, too much fluſtered to examine the Woman with ſufficient Art) to take her into a Room in his Houſe alone. He would, he ſaid, perſonate the Maſter of the Shop, would pretend to ſhew her ſome Jewels, and would undertake to get ſufficient Information out of her to ſecure the Rogues, and moſt probably all their Booty. This Propoſal was readily and thankfully accepted by Heartfree. Wild went immediately up Stairs into the Room appointed, whither the Apprentice, according according to Appointment, conducted the Lady.

THE Apprentice was ordered down Stairs the Moment the Lady entered the Room; and Wild, having ſhut the Door, approached her with great Ferocity in his Looks, and began to expatiate on the complicated Baſeneſs of the Crime ſhe had been guilty of; but though he uttered many good Leſſons of Morality, as we doubt whether from a particular Reaſon they may work any very good Effect on our Reader, we ſhall omit his Speech, and only mention his Concluſion, which was by aſking her, what Mercy ſhe could now expect from him? The young Lady, who had had a good Education, and had been more than once preſent at the Old Baily, very confidently denied the whole Charge, and ſaid, ſhe had receiv'd the Note from a Friend. Wild then, raiſing his Voice, told her, ſhe ſhould be immediately committed, and ſhe might depend on being convicted; "but, added he, changing his Tone, "as I have "a violent Affection for thee, my dear "Straddle, if you will follow my Advice,

" you, nor ſhall you be ever called in

" would you have me to do, Mr. Wild, re" plied the young Lady, with a pleaſanter
" Aſpect. You muſt know then, ſaid
" Wild, the Money you picked out of my " Pocket; (nay, by G——d you did, and if " you offer to flinch, you ſhall be convicted " of it,) I won at Play of a Fellow who, it
" ſeems, robbed my Friend of it; you
" muſt, therefore, give an Information on

" Good for Evil to you in this manner."
The Lady readily conſented; and Mr. Wild and ſhe embraced and kiſſed each other in a very tender and paſſionate Manner.

WILD, having given the Lady a little further Inſtruction, deſired her to ſtay a few Minutes behind him; then returned to his Friend, and acquainted him that he had diſcovered the whole Roguery, that the Woman had confeſſed confeſſed from whom ſhe had received the Note, and had promiſed to give an Information before a Juſtice of Peace; adding he was concerned he could not attend him thither, being obliged to go to the other End of the Town to receive thirty Pounds, which he was to pay that Evening. Heartfree ſaid that ſhould not prevent him of his Company, for he could eaſily lend him ſuch a Trifle: Which was accordingly done and accepted, and Wild, Heartfree, and the Lady went to the Juſtice together.

THE Warrant being granted, and the Conſtable being acquainted by the Lady, who received her Information from Wild of Mr. Fierce's Haunts, he was eaſily apprehended, and, being confronted with Miſs Straddle, who ſwore poſitively to him, though ſhe had never ſeen him before; he was committed to Newgate, where he immediately conveyed an Information to Wild of what had happened, and in the Evening received a Viſit from him.

WILD affected great Concern for his Friend's Misfortune, and as great Sur-

prize at the Means by which it was brought about. However, he ſaid, he muſt certainly be miſtaken in that Point, of his having had no Acquaintance with her; that, as for the Note, he had himſelf paid it away to a Shopkeeper, and would endeavour, by all ſafe Means, to enquire into the Secrets of the Matter; that he would find out Miſs Straddle, and endeavour to take off her Evidence; which, he obſerved, did not come home enough to endanger him; beſides he would ſecure him Witneſſes of an Alibi, and five or ſix to his Character; ſo that he need be under no Apprehenſion, for his Confinement till the Seſſions would be his only Puniſhment.

FIERCE, who was greatly comforted by theſe Aſſurances of his Friend, returned him many Thanks, and both ſhaking each other very earneſtly by the Hand, with a very hearty Embrace they ſeparated.

THE Hero conſidered with himſelf, that the ſingle Evidence of Miſs Straddle would not be ſufficient to convict Fierce, whom he reſolved to hang, as he was the Perſon who had principally refuſed to deliver him the ſtipulated Share of the Booty; he therefore went in Queſt of Mr. James Sly, the Gentleman who had aſſiſted in the Exploit; and found, and acquainted him with the apprehending of Fierce. Wild then intimating his Fear, leſt Fierce ſhould impeach Sly, adviſed him to be beforehand, and go directly to a Juſtice of Peace, and offer himſelf as an Evidence. Sly approved Mr. Wild's Opinion, went directly to a Magiſtrate, and was by him committed to the Gate-houſe, with a Promiſe of being admitted Evidence againſt his Companion.

FIERCE was, in a few Days, brought to his Trial at the Old Baily, when, to his great Confuſion, his old Friend Sly appeared againſt him, as did Miſs Straddle. His only Hopes were now in the Aſſiſtance which our Hero had promiſed him. Theſe unhappily failed him: So that the Evidence being plain againſt him, and he making no Defence, the Jury convicted him, the Court

Court condemned him, and Mr. Ketch executed him.

WITH ſuch infinite Addreſs, did this truly GREAT MAN know to play with the Paſſions of Men, and to ſet them at Variance with each other, and to work his own Purpoſes out of thoſe Jealouſies and Apprehenſions, which he was wonderfully ready at creating, by Means of thoſe great Arts, which the Vulgar call Treachery, Diſſembling, Promiſing, Lying, Falſhood, &c. but which are by GREAT MEN ſummed up in the collective Name of Policy, or Politicks, or rather Pollitricks; an Art of which, as it is the higheſt Excellence of Human Nature, ſo perhaps, was our GREAT MAN the moſt eminent Maſter.

Of Hats.

HE had now got together a very conſiderable Gang, compoſed of undone Gameſters, ruined Bailiffs, broken Tradesmen, idle Apprentices, and looſe and diſorderly Youth, who being born to no Fortune, nor bred to no Trade or Profeſſion, were willing to live luxurioufly without Labour. As theſe Perſons wore different Principles, i. e. Hats, frequent Diſſentions grew among them. There were particularly two Parties, viz. thoſe who wore Hats fiercely cocked, and thoſe who preferr'd the Nab or Trencher Hat, with the Brim flapping over their Eyes; between which, Jars and Animoſities almoſt perpetually aroſe. Wild, therefore, having aſſembled them all at an Alehouſe on the Night after Fierce's Execution, and perceiving evident Marks of their Miſunderſtanding, from their Behaviour to each other, addreſſed them in the follow-

" Gentlemen, I am aſhamed to ſee Men

* There is ſomething very myſterious in this Speech, which probably that Chapter written by Ariſtotle on this Subject, which is mentioned by a French Author, might have given ſome Light into; but that is unhappily among the loſt Works of that Philoſopher. It is remarkable, that Galerus which is Latin for a Hat, ſignifies likewiſe a Dog-fiſh, as the Greek Word Κυνέη doth the Skin of that Animal; of which I ſuppoſe the Hats or Helmets of the Ancients were compoſed, as ours at preſent are of the Beaver or Rabbit. Sophocles in the latter End of his Ajax, alludes to a Method of cheating in Hats, and the Scholiaſt on the Place tells us of one Crephontes, who was a Maſter of the Art. It is obſervable likewiſe, that Achilles, in the firſt Iliad of Homer, tells Agamemnon, in Anger, that he had Dog's Eyes. Now, as the Eyes of a Dog are handſomer than thoſe of almoſt any other Animal; this could be no Term of Reproach. He muſt therefore mean, that he had a Hat on, which, perhaps, from the Creature it was made of, or from ſome other Reaſon, might have been a Mark of Infamy. This ſuperſtitious Opinion may account for that Cuſtom, which hath deſcended through all Nations, of ſhewing Reſpect by pulling off this Covering; and that no Man is eſteemed fit to converſe with his Superiors with it on. I ſhall conclude this learned Note with remarking, that the Term Old Hat, is at preſent uſed by the Vulgar, in no very honourable Senſe.

Shewing the Conſequences which attended Heartfree's Adventures with Wild; all natural, and common enough to little Wretches who deal with GREAT MEN; together with ſome Precedents of Letters, being the different Methods of anſwering a Dun.

LET us now return to Heartfree, to whom the Note of four thouſand five hundred Pound which he had paid away, was returned, with an Account that the Acceptor was not to be found, and that on enquiring after him, they had heard he was run away, and conſequently the Money was now demanded of the Endorſer. The Apprehenſion of ſuch a Loſs would have affected any Man of Buſineſs, but much more one whoſe unavoidable Ruin it muſt prove. He expreſſed ſo much Concern and Confuſion on this Occaſion, that the Proprietor of the Note

Note was frightned, and reſolved to loſe no Time in ſecuring what he could. So that in the Afternoon of the ſame Day, Mr. Snap was commiſſioned to pay Heartfree a Viſit, which he did with his uſual Formality, and conveyed him to his own Houſe.

Mrs. Heartfree was no ſooner informed of what had happened to her Huſband, than ſhe raved like one diſtracted; but after ſhe had vented the firſt Agonies of her Paſſion in Tears and Lamentations, ſhe applied herſelf to all poſſible Means to procure her Huſband's Liberty. She haſtened to beg her Neighbours to ſecure Bail for him. But as the News had arrived at their Houſes before her, ſhe found none of them at home, except an honeſt Quaker, whoſe Servants durſt not tell a Lie. However, ſhe ſucceeded no better with him, for unluckily he had made an Affirmation the Day before, that he would never be Bail for any Man. After many fruitleſs Efforts of this Kind, ſhe repaired to her Huſband to comfort him, at leaſt with her Preſence. She found him ſealing the laſt of ſeveral Letters, Letters, which he had diſpatched to his Friends and Creditors. The Moment he ſaw her, a ſudden Joy ſparkled in his Eyes, which, however, had a very ſhort Duration; for Deſpair ſoon clouded them again; nor could he help burſting into ſome paſſionate Expreſſions of Concern for her and the little Family; which ſhe, on her Part, did her utmoſt to leſſen, by endeavouring to mitigate the Loſs, and raiſe in him Hopes from the Count, who might, ſhe ſaid, be poſſibly, only gone into the Country. She comforted him likewiſe, with the Expectation of Favour from his Acquaintance, eſpecially thoſe whom he had in a particular Manner obliged and ſerved. Laſtly, ſhe conjured him, by all the Value and Eſteem he profeſſed for her, not to endanger his Health, on which alone depended her Happineſs, by too great an Indulgence of Grief; aſſuring him that no State of Life could appear unhappy to her with him, unleſs his own Sorrow or Diſcontent made it ſo.

IN this Manner did this weak, poor-ſpirited Woman attempt to relieve her Huſband's Pains, which it would have rather become her to aggravate, by not only painting out his Miſery in the livelieſt Colours imaginable, but by upbraiding him with that Folly and Confidence which had occaſioned it, and by lamenting her own hard Fate, in being obliged to ſhare his Sufferings.

HEARTFREE returned this Goodneſs (as it is called) of his Wife, with the warmeſt Gratitude, and they paſt an Hour in a Scene of Tenderneſs, too low and contemptible to be recounted to our GREAT Readers. We ſhall therefore omit all ſuch Relations, as they tend only to make human Nature low and ridiculous.

THOSE Meſſengers who had obtained any Anſwers to his Letters now returned. We ſhall here copy a few of them, as they may ſerve for Precedents to others who have an Occaſion, which happens commonly enough in genteel Life, to anſwer the Impertinence of a Dun.

LETTER I.

MR. HEARTFREE,

MY Lord commands me to tell you, he is very much ſurprized at your Aſſurance in asking for Money, which you know hath been ſo little while due; however, as he intends to deal no longer at your Shop, he hath ordered me to pay you as ſoon as I ſhall have Caſh in Hand, which, conſidering many Diſburſements for Bills long due, &c. can't poſſibly promiſe any Time, &c. at preſent. And am

THERE were more Letters to much the ſame Purpoſe; but we propoſed giving our Reader a Taſte only. Of all theſe, the laſt was infinitely the moſt grating to poor Heartfree, as it came from one to whom, when in Diſtreſs, he had himſelf lent a conſiderable Sum, and of whoſe preſent flouriſhing Circumſtances he was well aſſured.

CHAP. VIII.

In which our Hero carries GREATNESS to an immoderate Height.

LET us remove, therefore, as faſt as we can this deteſtable Picture of Ingratitude, and preſent the much more agreeable Portrait of that Aſſurance to which the French very properly annex the Epithet of Good. Heartfree had ſcarce done reading his Letters, when our Hero appeared before his Eyes, not with that Aſpect with which a pitiful Parſon meets his Patron, after having oppoſed him at an Election, or which which a Doctor wears, when ſneaking away from a Door, where he is informed of his Patient's Death; not with that down-caſt Countenance which betrays the Man, who, after a ſtrong Conflict between Virtue and Vice, hath ſurrendered his Mind to the latter, and is diſcovered in his firſt Treachery; but with that noble, bold, GREAT Confidence with which a Prime Miniſter aſſures his Dependent, that the Place he promiſed him was diſpoſed of before. And ſuch Concern and Uneaſineſs as he expreſſes in his Looks on thoſe Occaſions did Wild teſtify on the firſt Meeting of his Friend. And as the ſaid Prime Miniſter chides you for Neglect of your Intereſt, in not having aſked in Time, ſo did our Hero attack Heartfree for his giving Credit to the Count, and, without ſuffering him to anſwer a Word, proceeded in a Torrent of Words to overwhelm him with Abuſe; which, however friendly its Intention might be, was ſcarce to be outdone by an Enemy. By theſe Means Heartfree, who might perhaps otherwiſe have vented ſome little Concern for that Recommendation which Wild had given him to the Count, was totally prevented from any ſuch Endeavour, and, like an invading Prince, when attacked in his own Dominions, forced to recall his whole Strength to defend himſelf at home. This indeed he did ſo well by inſiſting on the Figure and outward Appearance of the Count and his Equipage, that Wild at length grew a little more gentle, confeſſing that he had the leaſt Reaſon of all Mankind to cenſure another for an Imprudence of this Nature, as he was himſelf the moſt eaſily to be impoſed upon, and indeed had been ſo by this Count, who, if he was inſolvent, had, he ſaid, cheated him of five hundred Pounds. "But, for my own Part, ſaid he, I will not "yet deſpair, nor would I have you. Ma-"ny Men have found it convenient to re-"tire, or abſcond for a while, and after-"wards have paid their Debts, or at leaſt "handſomely compounded them. This I am "certain of, ſhould a Compoſition take place, "which is the worſt can be apprehended, "I ſhall be the only Loſer; for I ſhall "think myſelf obliged in Honour to repair "your Loſs, even though you muſt con-"feſs it was principally owing to your "own

" own Folly. Z——ds! had I imagined it " neceſſary, I would have cautioned you; " but I thought the Part of the Town " where he lived, ſufficient Caution not to " truſt him. —— And ſuch a Sum —— " The Devil muſt have been in you cer- " tainly!

MRS. Heartfree, who had before vented the moſt violent Execrations on Wild, was now thoroughly ſatisfied of his Innocence, and begged him not to inſiſt any longer on what he perceived ſo deeply affected her Huſband. She ſaid, Trade could not be carried on without Credit, and ſurely he was ſufficiently juſtified in giving it to ſuch a Perſon as the Count appeared to be. Beſides, ſhe ſaid, Reflections on what was paſt and irretrievable would be of little Service; that their preſent Buſineſs was to conſider how to prevent the evil Conſequences which threatened, and firſt to endeavour to procure her Huſband his Liberty. Why doth he not procure Bail? ſaid Wild. Alas! Sir, ſaid ſhe, we have applied to many of our Acquaintance in vain; we have met with Excuſes even where we could leaſt expect them. " Not Bail! an- " ſwered

" ſwered Wild, in a Paſſion, he ſhall have " Bail, if there is any in the World. It is " now very late, but truſt me to procure
" him Bail to Morrow Morning.

MRS. Heartfree received theſe Profeſſions with Tears, and told Wild he was a Friend indeed. She then propoſed to ſtay that Evening with her Huſband; but he would not permit her, on account of his little Family, whom he would not agree to truſt to the Care of Servants in this Time of Confuſion.

A Hackney Coach was then ſent for, but without Succeſs; for theſe, like Hackney Friends, always offer themſelves in the Sun-ſhine, but are never to be found when you want them. And as for a Chair, Mr. Snap lived in a Part of the Town which Chairmen very little frequent. The good Woman was therefore obliged to walk home, whither the gallant Wild offered to attend her as a Protector. This Favour was thankfully accepted, and the Huſband and Wife having taken a tender Leave of each other, the former mer was locked in, and the latter lock'd out by the Hands of Mr. Snap himſelf.

As this Viſit of Mr. Wild's to Heartfree may ſeem one of thoſe Paſſages in Hiſtory, which Writers, Drawcanſir-like, introduce only becauſe they dare; indeed as it may ſeem ſomewhat contradictory to the GREATNESS of our Hero, and may tend to blemiſh his Character with an Imputation of that kind of Friendſhip, which ſavours too much of Weakneſs and Imprudence; it may be neceſſary therefore to account for this Viſit, eſpecially to our more ſagacious Readers, whoſe Satisfaction we ſhall always conſult in the moſt eſpecial Manner. They are to know then, that at the firſt Interview with Mrs. Heartfree, Mr. Wild had conceived that Paſſion, or Affection, or Friendſhip, or Deſire for that handſome Creature, which the Gentlemen of this our Age agree to call LOVE; and which is indeed no other than that Friendſhip which, after the Exerciſe of the Dominical Day is over, a luſty Divine is apt to conceive for the well-dreſt Sirloin, or handſome Buttock, which the well-edified 'Squire, in Gratitude, ſets before before him, and which, ſo violent is his Love, he is deſirous to devour. Not leſs ardent was the hungry Paſſion of our Hero, who, from the Moment he had caſt his Eyes on that charming Diſh, caſt about in his Mind by what Method he might come at it. This, as he perceived, might moſt eaſily be effected after the Ruin of Heart-free, which, for other Conſiderations, he had intended. So he poſtponed all Endeavours for this purpoſe, till he had firſt effected what, by Order of Time, was particularly to precede this latter Deſign; with ſuch Regularity and true GREATNESS did this our Hero conduct all his Schemes, and ſo truly ſuperiour was he to all the Efforts of Paſſion, which ſo often diſconcert and diſappoint the nobleſt Views of others.

More GREATNESS in Wild. A low Scene between Mrs. Heartfree and her Children, and a Scheme of our Hero, worthy the higheſt Admiration, and even Aſtoniſhment.

WHEN firſt he conducted his Flame (or rather his Diſh, to continue our Metaphor) from the Proprietor, he had projected a Deſign of conveying her to one of thoſe Eating-Houſes in Covent-Garden, where female Fleſh is deliciouſly dreſt, and ſerved up to the greedy Appetites of young Gentlemen; but fearing leſt ſhe ſhould not come readily enough into his Wiſhes, and that, by too eager and haſty a Purſuit, he ſhould fruſtrate his future Expectations, and luckily at the ſame Time a noble Hint ſuggeſting itſelf to him, by which he might almoſt inevitably ſecure his Pleaſure, together with his Profit, he contented himſelf with waiting on Mrs.

Heartfree home, and, after many Proteſtations of Friendſhip and Service to her Huſband, took his Leave, and promiſed to viſit her early in the Morning, and conduct her back to Mr. Snap's.

WILD now retired to a Night-Cellar, where he found ſeveral of his Acquaintance, with whom he ſpent the remaining Part of the Night in revelling; nor did the leaſt Compaſſion for Heartfree's Misfortunes diſturb the Pleaſure of his Cups. So truly GREAT was his Soul, that it was abſolutely compoſed, ſave that an Apprehenſion of Miſs Tiſhy's making ſome Diſcovery (as ſhe was then in no good Temper towards him) a little ruffled and diſquieted the perfect Serenity he would otherwiſe have enjoyed. As he had, therefore, no Opportunity of ſeeing her that Evening, he wrote her a Letter full of ten thouſand Proteſtations of honourable Love, and (which he more depended on) containing as many Promiſes, in order to bring the young Lady into good Humour, without acquainting her in the leaſt with his Suſpicion, or giving her any Caution: For it was his conſtant Maxim, Never to put it it into any one's Head to do you a Miſchief, by acquainting them that it is in their Power.

WE muſt now return to Mrs. Heartfree, who paſt a ſleepleſs Night in as great Agonies and Horrour for the Abſence of her Huſband, as a fine well-bred Woman would feel at the Return of her's from a long Voyage or Journey. In the Morning the Children being brought to her, the eldeſt aſked where dear Papa was? At which ſhe could not refrain from burſting into Tears. The Child perciving it, ſaid, Don't cry, Mamma, I am ſure Papa would not ſtay abroad, if he could help it. At which Words ſhe caught the Child in her Arms, and throwing herſelf into the Chair, in an Agony of Paſſion, cried out, No, my Child, nor ſhall all the Malice of Hell keep us long aſunder.

THESE are Circumſtances which we ſhould not, for the Amuſement of ſix or ſeven Readers only, have inſerted, had they not ſerved to ſhew, that there are Weakneſſes in vulgar Life, which are commonly monly called Tenderneſs; to which GREAT MINDS are ſo entirely Strangers, that they have not even an Idea of them; and, ſecondly, by expoſing the Folly of this low Creature, to ſet off and elevate that GREATNESS, which we endeavour to draw a true Portrait of in this Hiſtory.

WILD entering the Room, found the Mother with one Child in her Arms, and the other at her Knee. After paying her his Compliments, he deſired her to diſmiſs the Children and Servant, for that he had ſomething of GREAT Moment to impart to her.

SHE immediately complied with his Requeſt, and, the Door being ſhut, aſked him with great Eagerneſs if he had ſucceeded in his Intentions of procuring the Bail. He anſwered, he had not endeavoured at it yet; for a Scheme had entered into his Head, by which ſhe might certainly preſerve her Huſband, herſelf, and her Family. In order to which he adviſed her inſtantly to remove with the moſt valuable Jewels ſhe had to Holland, before any Statute tute of Bankruptcy iſſued to prevent her; that he would himſelf attend her thither, and place her in Safety, and then return to deliver her Huſband, who would be eaſily able to ſatisfy his Creditors. He added, that he was that Inſtant come from Snap's, where he had communicated the Scheme to Heart-free, who had greatly approved it, and deſired her to put it in Execution without Delay, concluding that a Moment was not to be loſt.

THE Mention of her Huſband's Approbation left no Doubt in this poor Woman's Breaſt, ſhe only deſired a Moment's Time to pay him a Viſit, in order to take her Leave. But Wild peremptorily refuſed; he ſaid by every Moment's Delay ſhe riſqued the Ruin of her Family; that ſhe would be abſent only a few Days from him; adding, that if ſhe had not Reſolution enough to execute the Commands he brought her from her Huſband, his Ruin would lie at her Door, and, for his own Part, he muſt give up any farther meddling in his Affairs.

Digitized by Google

SHE then propoſed to take her Children with her; but Wild would not permit it, ſaying, they would only retard their Flight, and that it would be properer for her Huſband to bring them. He at length abſolutely prevailed on this poor Woman, who immediately packed up the moſt valuable Effects ſhe could find, and, after taking a tender Leave of her Infants, earneſtly commended them to the Care of a very faithful Servant. Then they called a Hackney-Coach, which conveyed them to an Inn, where they were furniſhed with a Chariot and ſix, in which they ſet forward for Harwich.

WILD rode with an exulting Heart; ſecure, as he now thought himſelf, of the Poſſeſſion of that lovely Woman, together with a rich Cargo. In ſhort, he enjoyed in his Mind all the Happineſs which unbridled Luſt and rapacious Avarice could promiſe him. As to the poor Creature, who was to ſatisfy theſe Paſſions, her whole Soul was employed in reflecting on the Condition of her Huſband and Chil-

Sea-Adventures very new and ſurprizing.

WHEN they arrived at Harwich, they found a Veſſel, which had put in there, juſt ready to depart for Rotterdam. So they went immediately on Board, and ſailed with a fair Wind; but they had hardly proceeded out of Sight of Land, when a ſudden and violent Storm aroſe, and drove them to the South Weſt; ſo that the Captain apprehended it impoſſible to avoid the Goodwin Sands, and he and all his Crew gave themſelves for loſt. Mrs. Heartfree, who had no other Apprehenſions from Death, but thoſe of leaving her dear Huſband and Children, fell on her Knees to beſeech the Almighty's Favour, when Wild, with a Contempt of Danger truly GREAT, took a Reſolution as worthy to be admired perhaps as any recorded of the braveſt Hero, ancient or modern. He ſaw the Tyrant Death ready to reſcue from him his intended Prey, which he had yet devoured only in Imagination. He therefore ſwore he would prevent him, and immediately attacked the poor Wretch, who was in the utmoſt Agonies of Deſpair, firſt with Solicitation, and afterwards with Force.

MRS. Heartfree, the Moment ſhe underſtood his Meaning, which, in her preſent Temper of Mind, and in the Opinion ſhe held of him, ſhe did not immediately, rejected him with all the Repulſes which Indignation and Horrour could animate: But when he attempted Violence, ſhe filled the Cabin with her Shrieks, which were ſo vehement, that they reached the Ears of the Captain, the Storm at this Time luckily abating. This Man, who was a Brute rather from his Education, and the Element he inhabited, than from Nature,

Nature, ran haſtily down to her Aſſiſtance, and finding her ſtruggling on the Ground with our Hero, he preſently reſcued her from her intended Raviſher; who was ſoon obliged to quit the Woman, in order to engage with her luſty Champion, who ſpared neither Pains nor Blows in the Aſſiſtance of his ſaid Paſſenger.

WHEN the ſhort Battle was over, in which our Hero, had he not been overpowered with Numbers, who came down on their Captain's Side, would have been victorious; the Captain rapped out a hearty Oath, and aſked Wild, If he had no more Chriſtianity in him than to raviſh a Woman in a Storm! To which the other GREATLY and ſullenly anſwered: "It was "very well; but d——n him, if he had "not Satisfaction the Moment they came "on Shore." The Captain replied, Kiſs ——————&c. and then, turning Wild out of the Cabin, he, at Mrs Heartfree's Requeſt, locked her into it, and returned to the Care of his Ship.

THE Storm was now entirely ceaſed, and nothing remained but the uſual ruffling of the Sea after it, when one of the Sailors ſpied a Sail at a Diſtance, which the Captain wiſely apprehended might be a Privateer (for we were then engaged in a War with France) and immediately ordered all the Sail poſſible to be crowded; but his Caution was in vain; for the little Wind which then blew, was directly adverſe; ſo that the Ship bore down upon them, and ſoon appeared to be what the Captain had feared, a French Privateer. He was in no Condition of Reſiſtance, and immediately ſtruck on her firing the firſt Gun. The Captain of the Frenchman, with ſeveral of his Hands, came on Board the Engliſh Veſſel; which they rifled of every thing valuable, and, amongſt the reſt, poor Mrs. Heartfree's whole Cargo, and then taking the Crew, together with the two Paſſengers, aboard his own Ship, he determined as the other would be only a Burthen to him, to ſink her, ſhe being very old and leaky, and not worth going back with to Dunkirk. He preſerved, therefore, nothing nothing but the Boat, as his own was none of the beſt, and then pouring a Broad-ſide into her, he ſent her to the bottom.

THE French Captain, who was a very young Fellow, and a Man of Gallantry, was preſently enamoured to no ſmall Degree with his beautiful Captive; and imagining Wild, from ſome Words he dropt, to be her Huſband, notwithſtanding the ill Affection towards him which appeared in her Looks, he aſked her, if ſhe underſtood French? She anſwered in the Affirmative, for indeed ſhe did perfectly well. He then aſked her, how long ſhe and that Gentleman (pointing to Wild) had been married? She anſwered with a deep Sigh, and many Tears, that ſhe was married indeed, but not to that Villain, who was the ſole Cauſe of all her Misfortunes. That Appellation raiſed a Curioſity in the Captain, and he importuned her in ſo preſſing, but gentle a manner to acquaint him with the Injuries ſhe complained of, that ſhe was at laſt prevailed on to recount to him the whole Hiſtory of her Afflictions. This ſo moved the Captain, who had too little Notions of GREATNESS, and ſo incenſed him againſt our Hero, that he reſolved to puniſh him; and, without Regard to the Laws of War, he immediately ordered out his ſhattered Long-boat, and, making Wild a Preſent of half-a-dozen Biſcuits to prolong his Miſery, he put them therein, and then committing him to the Mercy of the Sea, proceeded on his Cruize.

CHAP. XI.

The GREAT and wonderful Behaviour of our Hero in the Boat.

IT is probable, that a Deſire of ingratiating himſelf with his charming Captive, or rather Conqueror, had no little Share in promoting this extraordinary Act of illegal Juſtice; for he had conceived the ſame Sort of Paſſion, or Hunger, which Wild himſelf had felt, and was as much reſolved, by ſome Means or other, to ſatisfy it. We will leave him, however, at preſent, in the Purſuit of his Wiſhes, and attend attend our Hero in his Boat; ſince it is in Circumſtances of Diſtreſs, that true GREATNESS appears moſt wonderful. For, that a Prince in the midſt of his Courtiers, all ready to compliment him with his favourite Character, or Title; or that a Conqueror, at the Head of an hundred thouſand Men, all prepared to execute his Will, how ambitious, wanton, or cruel ſoever, ſhould, in the Giddineſs of his Pride, elevate himſelf many Degrees above thoſe his Tools, ſeems not difficult to be imagined, or indeed accounted for. But that a Man in Chains, in Priſons, nay, in the vileſt Dungeon, ſhould with perſevering Pride and obſtinate Dignity, diſcover that vaſt Superiority in his own Nature over the reſt of Mankind, who, to a vulgar Eye, ſeem much happier than himſelf; nay, that he ſhould diſcover Heaven and Providence (whoſe peculiar Care, it ſeems, he is) at that very Time at work for him; this is among the Arcana of GREATNESS, to be perfectly underſtood only by an Adept in that Science.

WHAT

WHAT could be imagined more miſerable than the Situation of our Hero at this Seaſon, floating in a little Boat on the open Seas, without Oar, without Sail, and at the Mercy of the firſt Wave to overwhelm him; which was indeed a much more eligible Fate than that alternative, which threatened him with almoſt unavoidable Certainty, viz. Starving with Hunger, the ſure Conſequence of a Continuance of the Calm.

OUR Hero finding himſelf in this Condition, began to ejaculate a Round of Blaſphemies, which the Reader, without being over pious, might be offended at ſeeing repeated. He then accuſed the whole Female Sex, and the Paſſion of Love (as he called it) particularly that which he bore to Mrs. Heartfree, as the unhappy Occaſion of his preſent Sufferings. At length, finding himſelf deſcending too much into the Language of Meanneſs and Complaint, he ſtopp'd ſhort, and ſoon after broke forth as follows. "D—— n it, a Man can die but "once, what ſignifies it! Every Man "muſt

Of PROVERBS. A Chapter full of very cunning and curious Learning.

HERE, Reader, we cannot omit an Opportunity of commending the vaſt Uſefulneſs of that Learning, which is to be collected from thoſe Funds of Knowledge, called PROVERBS: Being ſhort Aphoriſms, in which Men of Great Genius have wrapt up ſome egregious Diſcovery, either in Nature or Science, making it thus eaſily portable for the Memory, which is apt to fail under the Burthen of voluminous Erudition. CHAP. XIII.

The ſtrange and yet natural Eſcape of our Hero.

OUR Hero having with wonderful Reſolution thrown himſelf headlong into the Sea, as we have mentioned, was miraculouſly within two Minutes after replaced in his Boat; and this without the Aſſiſtance of a Dolphin or Sea-Horſe, or any other Fiſh or Animal, who are always as ready at Hand when a Poet or Hiſtorian pleaſes to call for them to carry a Hero through a Sea; as any Chairman at a Coffee-Houſe Door near St. James's, to convey a Beau over a Street, and preſerve his white Stockings. The Truth is, we do not chuſe to have any Recourſe to Miracles, from the ſtrict Obſervance we pay to that Rule of Horace,

Nec Deus interſit niſi dignus vindice nodus.

The Meaning of which is, Do not bring in a ſupernatural Agent when you can do without him; and indeed, we are much deeper read in natural than ſupernatural Cauſes: We will therefore endeavour to account for this extraordinary Event from the former of theſe; and in doing this it will be neceſſary to diſcloſe ſome profound Secrets to our Reader, extremely well worth his knowing, and which may ſerve him to account for many Occurrences of the Phænomenous Kind which have lately appeared in this our Hemiſphere.

Be it known then, that the Great Alma Mater Nature, is of all other Females the moſt obſtinate, and tenacious of her Purpoſe. So true is that Obſervation,

Na-

Naturam expellas furca licet, uſque recurret.

Which I need not render in Engliſh, it being to be found in a Book which moſt fine Gentlemen read. Whatever Nature, therefore, purpoſes to herſelf, ſhe never ſuffers any Reaſon, Deſign or Accident, to fruſtrate. Now, tho' it may ſeem to a ſhallow Obſerver, that ſome Perſons were deſigned by Nature for no Uſe or Purpoſe whatever; yet certain it is, that no Man is born into the World without his particular Allotment; viz. ſome to be Kings, ſome Stateſmen, ſome Embaſſadors, ſome Biſhops, ſome Generals, and ſo on. Of theſe there be two Kinds, thoſe to whom Nature is ſo generous to give ſome Endowment, qualifying them for the Parts ſhe intends them afterwards to act on this Stage; and thoſe whom ſhe uſes as Inſtances of her unlimited Power; and for whoſe Preferment to ſuch and ſuch Stations, Solomon himſelf could have invented no other Reaſon than that Nature deſigned them ſo. Theſe latter ſome great Philoſophers have, to ſhew them to be the Favourites of Nature, diſtinguiſhed by the honourable Appellation of NATURALS. Indeed the true Reaſon of the general Ignorance of Mankind on this Head ſeems to be this; That as Nature chuſes to execute theſe her Purpoſes by certain ſecond Cauſes or Tools, and as many of theſe ſecond Cauſes ſeem ſo totally foreign to her Deſign, the Wit of Man, which like his Eye, ſees beſt directly forward and very little and imperfectly, what is oblique, is not able to diſcern the End by the Means. Thus, how a handſome Wife or Daughter ſhould contribute to execute her original Deſignation of a General; or how Flattery ſhould denote a Judge, or Impiety and Atheiſm, a Biſhop, he is not capable of comprehending. And indeed, we ourſelves, wiſe as we are, are forced to reaſon ab effectu, and if we were aſked what Nature had intended ſuch Men for, before ſhe herſelf had by the Event demonſtrated her Purpoſe, it is poſſible we might be ſometimes puzzled to declare; for it muſt be confeſſed, that at firſt Sight, and to a Man uninſpired, great Fortitude of Mind with a vaſt Capacity and Knowledge, might induce a Belief in the Beholder, that ſuch Endowments were were by Nature designed for Power and Honour rather than the reverse; whereas daily Experience convinces us of the contrary, and drives us as it were into the Opinion I have here disclosed.

Now, Nature having originally intended our GREAT MAN for that final Exaltation, which as it is the most proper and becoming End of all GREAT MEN, it were heartily to be wished they might all arrive at; would by no Means be diverted from her Purpose. She therefore no sooner spied him in the Water, then she softly whispered in his Ear to attempt the Recovery of his Boat; which Call he immediately obeyed, and being a good Swimmer with great Facility accomplished it.

THUS we think this Passage in our History, at first so greatly surprising, is very naturally accounted for; and our Relation rescued from the Prodigious which, tho' it often occurs in Biography, is not to be encouraged nor much commended on any Occasion, unless when absolutely necessary to prevent the History's being at an End.

Secondly, We hope our Hero is juſtified from that Imputation of want of Reſolution, which muſt be fatal to the GREATNESS of his Character.

CHAP. XIV.

The Concluſion of the Boat Adventure, and the End of the ſecond Book.

OUR Hero paſt the Remainder of the Evening, the Night, and the next Day, in a Condition not much to be envied by any Paſſion of the human Mind, unleſs by Ambition; which, provided it can only entertain itſelf with the moſt diſtant Muſic of Fame's Trumpet, can diſdain all the Pleaſures of the Senſualiſt, and thoſe more ſolemn, tho' quieter Comforts, which a good Conſcience ſuggeſts to a Chriſtian Philoſopher.

HE ſpent his Time in Contemplation, that is to ſay, in Blaſpheming, curſing, and ſometimes ſinging and whiſtling. At laſt, when when Cold and Hunger had almoſt ſubdued his native Fierceneſs, it being a good deal paſt Midnight, and extremely dark, he thought he beheld a Light at a Diſtance, which the Cloudineſs of the Sky prevented his miſtaking for a Star; This Light, however, did not ſeem to approach him, at leaſt by ſuch imperceptible Degrees, that it gave him very little Comfort, and at length totally forſook him. He then renewed his Contemplation as before, in which he continued till the Day began to break; when, to his inexpreſſible Delight, he beheld a Sail at a very little Diſtance, and which luckily ſeemed to be making towards him. He was likewiſe ſoon eſpied by thoſe in the Veſſel, who wanted no Signals to inform them of his Diſtreſs, and as it was almoſt a Calm, and their Courſe lay within five hundred Yards of him, they hoiſted out their Boat and fetched him aboard.

THE Captain of this Ship was a French-Man; ſhe was laden with Deal from Norway, and had been extremely ſhattered in the late Storm. This Captain was of that kind of Men, who are actuated by a general

ral Humanity, and whoſe Compaſſion can be raiſed by the Diſtreſs of a Fellow-Creature, though of a Nation whoſe King had quarrelled with the Monarch of their own. He therefore commiſerating the Circumſtances of Wild, who had dreſt up a Story proper to impoſe on ſuch a ſilly Fellow; told him, that, as himſelf well knew, he muſt be a Priſoner on his Arrival in France, but that he would endeavour to procure his Redemption; for which our Hero greatly thanked him. But as they were making very ſlow Sail (for they had loſt their Main-maſt in the Storm) Wild ſaw a little Veſſel at a Diſtance, they being within a few Legues of the Engliſh Shore, which, on Enquiry, he was informed was probably an Engliſh Fiſhing-Boat. And, it being then perfectly calm, he promiſed, that if they would accommodate him with an Oar, he could get within Reach of the Boat, at leaſt near enough to make Signals to her; and he preferred any Riſque to the certain Fate of being a Priſoner. As his Courage was ſomewhat reſtored by the Proviſions (eſpecially Brandy) with which the Frenchman had ſupplied him, he was ſo ſo earneſt in his Entreaties, that the Captain, after many Perſuaſions, at length complied; and he was furniſhed with an Oar, with ſome Bread, Pork, and a Bottle of Brandy. Then, taking Leave of his Preſervers, he again betook himſelf to his Boat, and rowed ſo heartily, that he ſoon came within the Sight of the Fiſherman, who immediately made towards him, and took him aboard.

No ſooner was Wild got ſafe on Board the Fiſherman, than he begged him to make the utmoſt Speed into Deal; for that the Veſſel, which was ſtill in Sight, was a diſtreſſed Frenchman, bound for Havre de Grace, and might eaſily be made a Prize, if there was any Ship ready to go in Purſuit of her. So nobly and GREATLY did our Hero neglect all Obligations conferred on him by the Enemies of his Country, that he would have contributed all he could to the taking his Benefactor, to whom he owed both his Life and his Liberty.

THE Fiſherman took his Advice, and ſoon arrived at Deal, where the Reader will, I doubt not, be as much concerned as Wild was, that there was not a ſingle Ship prepared to go on the Expedition.

OUR Hero now ſaw himſelf once more ſafe on Terra firma; but unluckily at ſome Diſtance from that City where Men of Ingenuity can moſt eaſily ſupply their Wants without the Aſſiſtance of Money. However, as his Talents were ſuperiour to every Difficulty, he framed ſo dextrous an Account of his being a Merchant, having been taken and plundered by the Enemy, and of his great Effects in London, that he was not only heartily regaled by the Fiſherman at his Houſe; but made ſo handſome a Booty by way of Borrowing, a Method of taking which we have before mentioned, to have his Approbation, that he was enabled to provide himſelf with a Place in the Stage-Coach; which (as GOD permitted it to perform the Journey) brought him, at the appointed time, to an Inn in the Metropolis.

BOOK III.

CHAP. I.

The low and pitiful Behaviour of Heartfree; and the fooliſh Conduct of his Apprentice.

HIS Misfortunes did not entirely prevent Heartfree from cloſing his Eyes. On the contrary, he ſlept ſeveral Hours the firſt Night of his Confinement. However, he perhaps paid too ſeverely ſeverely dear both for his Repoſe, and for a ſweet Dream which accompanied it, and repreſented his little Family in one of thoſe tender Scenes, which had frequently paſt in the Days of his Happineſs and Proſperity, when the Proviſion they were making for the future Fortunes of their Children uſed to be one of the moſt agreeable Topics of Diſcourſe, with which he and his Wife entertained themſelves. The Pleaſantneſs of this Viſion, therefore, ſerved only, on his awakening, to ſet forth his preſent Miſery with additional Horrour, and to heighten the dreadful Ideas which now crowded on his Mind.

HE had ſpent a conſiderable Time after his firſt riſing from the Bed on which he had, without undreſſing, thrown himſelf, and now began to wonder at Mrs. Heart-free's long Abſence; but as Men are apt (and perhaps wiſely too) to draw comfortable Concluſions from malign Events; ſo he hoped the longer her Stay was, the more certain was his Deliverance. At length his Impatience prevailed, and he was juſt going to diſpatch a Meſſenger to his own Houſe

Houſe, when his Apprentice came to pay him a Viſit, and, on his Enquiry, informed him, that his Wife had departed in Company with Mr. Wild many Hours before, and had carried all his moſt valuable Effects with her; adding at the ſame time, that ſhe had acquainted him ſhe had her Huſband's Orders for ſo doing.

It is the Obſervation of many wiſe Men, who have ſtudied the Anatomy of the human Soul with more Attention than our young Phyſicians generally beſtow on that of the Body; that great and violent Surprize hath a different Effect from that which is wrought in a good Houſewife by perceiving any Diſorders in her Kitchen; who, on ſuch Occaſions, commonly ſpreads the Diſorder, not only over her whole Family, but the Neighbourhood. Now, theſe great Calamities, eſpecially when ſudden, tend to ſtifle and deaden all the Faculties, inſtead of elevating them; and accordingly one Herodotus tells us a Story of Cræſus, King of Lydia, who, on beholding his Servants and Courtiers led captive, wept bitterly; but when he ſaw his Wife and Children in in that Condition, ſtood ſtupid and motionleſs; ſo ſtood poor Heartfree on this Relation of his Apprentice, nothing moving but his Colour, which entirely forſook his Countenance.

THE Apprentice, who had not in the leaſt doubted the Veracity of his Miſtreſs, perceiving the Surprize which too viſibly appeared in his Maſter, became ſpeechleſs likewiſe, and both remained ſilent ſome Minutes, gazing with Aſtoniſhment and Horrour at each other. At laſt Heartfree cry'd out in an Agony: "My Wife deſert-"ed me in my Misfortunes!" GOD forbid, Sir, anſwered the other. "And what is "become of my poor Children, replied "Heartfree?" They are at home, Sir, ſaid the Apprentice. "GOD be praiſed, "ſhe hath forſaken them too, cries Heart-"free: Fetch them hither this Inſtant. "Go, my dear Jack, bring hither my "little all which remains now: Fly, Child, "if thou doſt not intend likewiſe to for-"ſake me in my Afflictions." The Youth anſwered he would die ſooner than entertain ſuch a Thought, and, begging his Maſter to be comforted, inſtantly obeyed his Orders.

HEARTFREE, the Moment the young Man was departed, threw himſelf on his Bed in an Agony of Deſpair; but, recollecting himſelf after he had vented the firſt Sallies of his Paſſion, he began to queſtion the Infidelity of his Wife, as a Matter impoſſible. He ran over in his Thoughts the uninterrupted Tenderneſs which ſhe had alway ſhewn him, and, for a Minute, blamed the Raſhneſs of his Belief againſt her; 'till the many Circumſtances of her having left him ſo long, and neither writ nor ſent to him ſince her Departure with all his Effects, and with Wild, of whom he was not before without Suſpicion; and laſtly and chiefly, her falſe Pretence to his Commands, entirely turned the Scale, and convinced him of her Diſloyalty.

WHILE he was in theſe Agitations of Mind, the good Apprentice, who had uſed the utmoſt Expedition, brought his Children to him. He embraced them with the moſt paſſionate Fondneſs, and imprinted number-numberleſs Kiſſes on their little Lips. The little Girl flew to him with almoſt as much Eagerneſs as he himſelf expreſt at her Sight, and cry'd out: "O Papa, why did "you not come home to poor Mamma "all this while; I thought you would not "have left your little Nanny ſo long." After which he aſked for her Mother, and was told ſhe had kiſs'd them in the Morning, and cried very much for his Abſence. All which brought a Flood of Tears into the Eyes of this weak, ſilly Man, who had not GREATNESS ſufficient to conquer theſe low Efforts of Tenderneſs and Humanity.

HE then proceeded to enquire of the Maid-ſervant, who acquainted him, that ſhe knew no more than that her Miſtreſs had taken Leave of her Children in the Morning with many Tears and Kiſſes, and had recommended them in the moſt earneſt manner to her Care; which, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had promiſed faithfully to do, and would, while they were entruſted to her, fulfil. For which Profeſſion Heartfree expreſſed much Gratitude to her; and, after indulging himſelf with ſome little Fondneſſes, which we ſhall not relate, he delivered his Children into the good Woman's Hands, and diſmiſſed her.

CHAP. II.

A Soliloquy of Heartfree's full of low and baſe Ideas, without a Syllable of GREATNESS.

BEING now alone, he ſat ſome ſhort Time ſilent, and then burſt forth into the following Soliloquy:

" WHAT ſhall I do? Shall I abandon " myſelf to a diſpirited Deſpair, or fly in " the Face of the Almighty! Surely both " are unworthy of a wiſe Man; for what " can be more vain than weakly to la- " ment my Fortune, if irretrievable, or, " if Hope remains, to offend that Being, " who can moſt ſtrongly ſupport it: But " are my Paſſions then voluntary? Wherein our Hero proceeds in the Road to GREATNESS.

BUT we muſt not detain our Reader too long with thoſe low Stories. He is doubtleſs as impatient as the Audience at the Theatre, till the principal Figure returns on the Stage; we will therefore indulge his Inclination, and purſue the Actions of the GREAT WILD.

THERE happened to be in the Stage-Coach, in which Mr. Wild travelled from Dover, a certain young Gentleman who had ſold an Eſtate in Kent; and was going to London to receive the Money. There was likewiſe a handſome young Woman who had left her Parents at Canterbury, and was proceeding to the ſame City, in order (as ſhe informed her Fellow Travellers) to make her Fortune. With this Girl the young young Spark was ſo much enamoured, that he publickly acquainted her with the Purpoſe of his Journey, and offered her a conſiderable Sum in Hand and a Settlement, if ſhe would conſent to return with him into the Country, where ſhe would be at a ſafe Diſtance from her Relations. Whether ſhe accepted this Propoſal or no, we are not able with any tolerable Certainty to deliver: But Wild, the Moment he heard of this Money, began to caſt about in his Mind by what Means he might become Maſter of it. He entred into a long Harangue about the Methods of carrying Money ſafely on the Road, and ſaid, he had at that Time two Bank Bills of a hundred Pounds each ſowed in his Stock; which, added he, is ſo ſafe a Way, that if I met never ſo many Highwaymen it is almoſt impoſſible I ſhould be in any Danger of being robbed.

THE Gentleman, who was no Deſcendant of Solomon's, greatly approved Wild's Ingenuity, and thanking him for his Information, declared he would follow his Example when he returned into the Country:

By which Means he propoſed to ſave the Premium commonly taken for the Remittance. Wild had then no more to do but to inform himſelf rightly of the Time of the Gentleman's Journey, which he did with great Certainty, before they ſeparated.

AT his Arrival in Town, he fixed on two whom he regarded as the moſt reſolute of his Gang for this Enterprize; and accordingly having ſummoned the principal or moſt deſperate, as he imagined him of theſe two (for he never choſe to communicate within the Preſence of more than one) he propoſed to him the robbing and murthering this Gentleman.

MR. Marybone (for that was the Gentleman's Name to whom he applied) readily agreed to the Robbery; but he heſitated at the Murther. He ſaid, as to Robbery, he had, on much weighing and conſidering the Matter, very well reconciled his Conſcience to it; for tho' that noble Kind of Robbery which was executed on the Highway, was from the Cowardice of Mankind leſs frequent, yet the baſer and meaner Species ſometimes called Cheating, but more commonly known by the Name of Robbery within the Law, was in a Manner univerſal. He did not therefore pretend to the Reputation of being ſo much honeſter than other People; but could by no Means ſatisfy himſelf in the Commiſſion of Murther, which was a Sin of the moſt heinous Nature, and ſo immediately proſecuted by God's Judgment, that it never paſſed undiſcovered or unpuniſhed.

WILD, with the utmoſt Diſdain in his Countenance, anſwered as follows. "Art "thou he whom I have ſelected out of my "whole Gang for this glorious Undertak- "ing, and doſt thou cant of God's Re- "venge againſt Murther. WILD thus ended his Speech, which had not the deſired Effect on Marybone: He agreed to the Robbery, but would not undertake the Murther, as Wild (who feared that by Marybone's demanding to ſearch the Gentleman's Neck, he might hazard Suſpicion himſelf) inſiſted. Marybone was immediately entered by Wild in his Black-Book, and was preſently after impeached and executed, as a Fellow on whom his Leader could not place ſufficient Dependence.

CHAP. IV.

In which a young Hero, of wonderful good Promiſe, makes his firſt Appearance, with many other GREAT MATTERS.

OUR Hero next applied himſelf to another of his Gang, who inſtantly received his Orders, and inſtead of heſitating at a ſingle Murther, aſked if he ſhould blow out the Brains of all the Paſſengers, Coachman and all. But Wild, whoſe Moderation we have before noted, would not permit him; and therefore having given him an exact Deſcription of the devoted Perſon, with his other neceſſary Inſtructions, he diſmiſſed him, with ſtricteſt Orders to avoid, if poſſible, doing hurt to any other Perſon.

THE Name of this Youth, who will hereafter make ſome Figure in this Hiſtory, being the Achates of our Æneas, or rather the Hæpheſtion of our Alexander was Fire-blood.

blood. He had every Qualification to make a Second-Rate GREAT MAN; or in other Words, he was completely equipped for the Tool of a Real or First-Rate GREAT MAN. We ſhall therefore (which is the propereſt Way of dealing with this Kind of GREATNESS) deſcribe him negatively, and content ourſelves with telling our Reader what Qualities he had not: In which Number were Humanity, Modeſty, and Fear, not one Grain of any of which was mingled in his whole Compoſition.

WE will now leave this Youth, who was eſteemed the moſt promiſing of the whole Gang, and whom Wild often declared to be one of the prettieſt Lads he had ever ſeen, of which Opinion, indeed, were moſt other People of his Acquaintance; we will however leave him at his Entrance on this Enterprize, and keep our Attention fixed on our Hero, whom we ſhall obſerve taking large Strides towards the Summit of human Glory.

WILD, immediately at his Return to Town, went to pay a Viſit to Miſs Lætitia Snap; for he had that Weakneſs of ſuffering himſelf to be enſlaved by Women, ſo naturally incident to Men of Heroic Diſpoſition; to ſay the Truth, it might more properly be called a Slavery to his own Appetite; for could he have ſatisfied that, he had not cared three Farthings what had become of the little Tyrant for whom he profeſt ſo violent a Regard. Here he was informed that Mr. Heartfree had been conveyed to Newgate the Day before, the Writ being then returnable. He was ſomewhat concerned at this News; not from any Compaſſion for the Misfortunes of Heartfree, whom he hated with ſuch Inveteracy, that one would have imagined he had ſuffered the ſame Injuries from him which he had done towards him. His Concern therefore had another Motive: In Fact, he was uneaſy at the Place of Mr. Heartfree's Confinement, as it was to be the Scene of his future Glory, and where conſequently he ſhould be frequently obliged to ſee a Face Face which Hatred and not Shame, made him deteſt the Sight of.

To prevent this, therefore, ſeveral Methods ſuggeſted themſelves to him. At firſt, he thought of removing him out of the Way by the ordinary Method of Murther, which he doubted not but Fireblood would be very ready to execute; for that Youth had at their laſt Interview, ſworn, D——n his Eyes, he thought there was no better Paſtime than blowing a Man's Brains out. But beſides the Danger of this Method, it did not look horrible nor barbarous enough for the laſt Miſchief which he ſhould do to Heartfree. Conſidering, therefore, a little farther with himſelf, he at length came to a Reſolution to hang him if poſſible, the very next Seſſions.

Now, tho' the Obſervation, How apt Men are to hate thoſe they injure, or how unforgiving they are of the Injuries they do themſelves, be common enough, yet I do not remember to have ever ſeen the Reaſon of this ſtrange Phænomenon, as at firſt it appears. Know therefore, Reader, that with much and ſevere Scrutiny we have diſcovered this Hatred to be founded on the Paſſion of Fear, and to ariſe from an Apprehenſion that the Perſon whom we have ourſelves greatly injured, will uſe all poſſible Endeavours to revenge and retaliate the Injuries we have done him. An Opinion ſo firmly eſtabliſhed in bad and Great Minds (and thoſe who confer Injuries on others, have ſeldom very good, or mean ones) that no Benevolence nor even Beneficence on the injured Side, can eradicate it. On the contrary they refer all theſe Acts of Kindneſs to Impoſture and Deſign of lulling their Suſpicion, till an Opportunity offers of ſtriking a ſurer and ſeverer Blow; and thus while the good Man who hath received it, hath truly forgotten the Injury, the evil Mind which did it, hath it in lively and freſh Remembrance.

As we ſcorn to keep any ſuch Diſcoveries ſecret from our Readers, whoſe Inſtruction as well as Diverſion, we have greatly conſidered in this Hiſtory, we have here digreſſed ſomewhat to communicate the following ſhort Leſſon to thoſe who are ſimple, and

More and more GREATNESS, unparallelled in Hiſtory or Romance.

IN Order to accompliſh this great and noble Scheme, which the vaſt Genius of Wild had contrived, the firſt neceſſary Step ſeemed to regain the Confidence of Heartfree. He determined therefore to undertake it, how impoſſible ſoever it appeared. The chief Requiſite on this Occaſion, was that ſteady Countenance in which he was ſuperior to all Mankind. He went to Newgate, and burſt reſolutely into the Preſence of Heartfree, whom he eagerly embraced and kiſſed; and then, firſt arraigning his own Raſhneſs, and afterwards lamenting his unfortunate want of Succeſs, he acquainted him with the Particulars of what had happened; concealing only that ſingle Incident of his Attack on the other's Wife, the Lies he had told her concerning her Huſband's Commands; and his Motive to the Undertaking, which he aſſured Heart-free was a Deſire to preſerve his Effects from a Statute of Bankruptcy.

The frank Openneſs of this Declaration, with the Compoſure of Countenance with which it was delivered; his ſeeming only ruffled by the Concern for his Friend's Misfortune; the Probability of Truth attending it, joined to the Boldneſs and diſintereſted Appearance of this Viſit, together with his many Profeſſions of immediate Service, at a Time when he could not have the leaſt viſible Motive from Self-Love; and above all, his offering him Money, the laſt and ſureſt Token of Friendſhip, ruſhed with ſuch united Force on the well-diſpoſed Heart, as it is vulgarly called, of this ſimple Man, that they inſtantly ſtaggered and ſoon ſubverted all the Determination he had before made in Prejudice of Wild: Who perceiving the Ballance to be turning in in his Favour, preſently threw in a hundred Imprecations on his own Folly and ill-adviſed Forwardneſs to ſerve his Friend, which had thus unhappily produced his Ruin; he added as many Curſes on the Count, whom he vowed to purſue with Revenge all over Europe: Laſtly, he caſt in ſome Grains of Comfort, aſſuring Heartfree that his Wife was fallen into the gentleſt Hands, that ſhe would be carried no farther than Dunkirk, whence ſhe might be very eaſily redeemed.

Heartfree, to whom the lighteſt Preſumption of his Wife's Fidelity would have been more delicious than the abſolute Reſtoration of all his Jewels, and who, indeed, had with the utmoſt Difficulty been brought to entertain the ſlighteſt Suſpicion of her Inconſtancy, immediately abandoned all Diſtruſt of both her and his Friend, whoſe Sincerity (luckily for Wild's Purpoſe) ſeemed to him to depend on the ſame Evidence. He then embraced our Hero, who had in his Countenance all the Symptoms of the deepeſt Concern, and begged him to be comforted; ſaying, that the Intentions rather than the Actions of Men

Men conferred Obligations; that as to the Event of human Affairs, it was governed either by Chance or ſome ſuperior Agent, that Friendſhip was concerned only in the Direction of it. And ſuppoſe it failed of Succeſs, or produced an Event never ſo contrary to its Deſign, the Merit of a good Intention was not in the leaſt leſſened, but was rather entitled to Compaſſion.

WILD having thus, with admirable and truly laudable Conduct, atchieved the firſt Step, began to diſcourſe on the Badneſs of the World; and particularly to blame the Severity of Creditors, who ſeldom or never attended to any unfortunate Circumſtances, but without Mercy inflicted Confinement on the Debtor, whoſe Body the Law, with very unjuſtifiable Rigour, delivered into their Power. He added, that for his Part, he looked on this Reſtraint to be as heavy a Puniſhment as any appointed by Law for the greateſt Offenders. That the Loſs of Liberty was, in his Opinion, equal to, if not worſe, than the Loſs of Life; that he had always determined, if by any Accident or Misfortune he had been ſub-

jected to the former, he would run the greateſt Riſque of the latter to reſcue himſelf from it; which he ſaid, if Men did not want Reſolution, was always eaſy enough to do; for that it was ridiculous to conceive that two or three Men could confine two or three hundred, unleſs the Priſoners were either Fools or Cowards, eſpecially when they were neither chained nor fettered. He went on in this Manner, till perceiving the utmoſt Attention in Heartfree, he ventured to propoſe to him an Endeavour to make his eſcape, which he ſaid might eaſily be executed; that he would himſelf raiſe a Party in the Priſon, and that, if a Murther or two ſhould happen in the Attempt, he (Heartfree) might keep free from any Share either in the Guilt or in the Danger.

THERE is one Misfortune which attends all great Men and their Schemes, viz. That in order to carry them into Execution, they are obliged in propoſing their Purpoſe to their Tools, to diſcover themſelves to be of that Diſpoſition, in which certain little Writers have adviſed Mankind to place no Confidence:

fidence: An Advice which hath been ſometimes taken. Indeed many Inconveniencies ariſe to the ſaid GREAT MEN from theſe Scriblers publiſhing without Reſtraint their Hints or Alarms to Society; and many great and glorious Schemes have been thus fruſtrated; wherefore it were to be wiſhed that in all well regulated Governments, ſuch Liberty ſhould be by ſome wholeſome Laws reſtrained; and all Writers inhibited from venting any other Inſtructions to the People than what ſhould be firſt approved and licenſed by the ſaid GREAT MEN, or their proper Inſtruments or Tools; by which Means nothing would ever be publiſhed but what made for the advancing their moſt noble Projects.

HEARTFREE, whoſe Suſpicions were again raiſed by this Advice, viewing Wild with inconceivable Diſdain, ſpoke as follows. "There is one thing, the Loſs of "which I ſhould deplore infinitely beyond "that of Liberty and of Life alſo, I mean "that of a good Conſcience. THOUGH our Hero heard all this with proper Contempt, he made no direct Anſwer; but endeavoured to evade his Propoſal as much as poſſible, and promiſing to uſe all honeſt Means for his Service, ſince he was ſo ſcrupulous, he took his Leave of his Friend for the preſent. Heart-free, having indulged himſelf an Hour with his Children, repaired to Reſt, which he enjoyed quiet and undiſturbed; whilſt Wild, diſdaining Repoſe, ſat up all Night, conſulting how he might bring about the final Deſtruction of his Friend, without being beholden to any Aſſiſtance from himſelf; which he now deſpaired of procuring. With the Reſult of theſe Conſultations we ſhall acquaint our Reader in good time; but at preſent we have Matters of much more Conſequence to relate to him.

CHAP. VI.

The Event of Fireblood's Adventure, and a Treaty of Marriage, which might have been concluded either at Smithfield or St. James's.

FIREBLOOD returned from his Enterprize unſucceſsful. The Gentleman happened to go home another Way than he had intended; ſo that the whole Deſign miſcarried. Fireblood had indeed robbed the Coach, and wantonly diſcharged a Piſtol into it, which ſlightly wounded one of the Paſſengers in the Arm. The Booty he met with was not very conſiderable, and much leſs than that with which he acquainted Wild; for, of eleven Pounds in Money, two Silver-watches, and a Wedding-Ring, he produced no more than two Guineas and the Ring, which he proteſted with numberleſs Oaths was his whole Booty. However, when an Advertiſement of the Robbery was publiſhed, with a Reward promiſed for the Ring and the Watches, Fireblood was obliged to confeſs the whole, and and to acquaint our Hero where he had pawned the latter; which he, taking the full Value of them for his Pains, reſtored to the right Owner.

He did not fail catechizing his young Friend on this Occaſion. He ſaid, he was ſorry to ſee any of his Gang guilty of a Breach of Honour; that without Honour Priggery was at an End; that if a Prig had but Honour, he would overlook every Vice in the World. But, nevertheleſs, he ſaid, he would forgive him this time, as he was a hopeful Lad, and wiſhed never afterwards to find him delinquent in this grand Point.

WILD had now brought his Gang to great Regularity: He was obeyed and feared by them all. He had likewiſe eſtabliſhed an Office where all Men, who were robbed, paying the Value only, (or a little more) of their Goods might have them again. This was of notable Uſe to ſeveral Perſons who had loſt Pieces of Plate they had received from their Grandmothers; to others who had a particular Value for certain tain Rings, Watches, Heads of Canes, Snuff-Boxes, &c. for which they would not have taken twenty times as much as they were worth, either becauſe they had them a long time, or that ſomebody elſe had had them before, or from ſome other ſuch excellent Reaſon, which often ſtamps a greater Value on a Toy, than the great Bubble-boy himſelf would have the Impudence to ſet upon it.

By theſe Means he ſeemed in ſo promiſing a Way of procuring a Fortune, and was regarded in ſo thriving a Light by all the Gentlemen of his Acquaintance, as by the Keeper and Turnkeys of Newgate, by Mr. Snap, and others of his Occupation; that Mr. Snap one Day, taking Mr. Wild the elder aſide, very ſeriouſly propoſed what they had often lightly talked over, a ſtrict Union between their Families, by marrying his Daughter Tiſhy to our Hero. This Propoſal was very readily accepted by the old Gentleman, who promiſed to acquaint his Son with it.

On the Morrow, on which this Meſſage was to be delivered, our Hero, little dreaming of the Happineſs which, of its own Accord, was advancing ſo near towards him, had called Fireblood to him, and, after informing him of the Violence of his Paſſion for the young Lady, and aſſuring him what Confidence he repoſed in him and his Honour, to which the other anſwered, he would be ſure to diſcharge whatever he entruſted to him, with the utmoſt Fidelity; he diſpatched him to Miſs Tiſhy with the the following Letter, which we here inſert, not only as we take it to be extremely curious, but to be a much better Pattern for that Epiſtolary kind of Writing, which is generally called Love-Letters, than any to be found in the Academy of Compliments, and which we challenge all the Beaus of our Time to equal either in Matter or Spelling.

If the ſpelling of this Letter be not ſo ſtrictly orthographical, the Reader will be pleaſed to remember, that ſuch a Defect might be worthy of Cenſure in a low and and ſcholaſtic Character; but can be no Blemiſh in that ſublime GREATNESS, of which we endeavour to raiſe a complete Idea in this Hiſtory. In which kind of Compoſition, Spelling, or indeed any kind of human Literature, hath never been thought a neceſſay Ingredient; for if theſe ſort of GREAT Perſonages can but complot and contrive their noble Schemes, and hack and hew Mankind ſufficiently, there will never be wanting fit and able Perſons who can ſpell, to record their Praiſes. Again, if it ſhould be obſerved that the Style of this Letter doth not exactly correſpond with that of our Hero's Speeches, which we have here recorded, we anſwer, it is ſufficient if in theſe the Hiſtorian adheres faithfully to the Matter, though he embelliſhes the Diction with ſome Flouriſhes of his own Eloquence, without which the excellent Speeches recorded in ancient Hiſtorians (particularly in Salluſt) would have ſcarce

Nay, even amongſt the Moderns, famous as they are for Elocution (it may be doubted whether thoſe inimitable Harangues, publiſhed in the Monthly Magazines) came literally from the Mouths of the HURGOS, &c. as they are there inſerted, or whether we may not rather ſuppoſe ſome Hiſtorian of great Eloquence hath borrowed the Matter only, and adorned it with thoſe Rhetorical Flowers for which many of the ſaid HURGOS, are not ſo extremely eminent.

Matters preliminary to the Marriage between Mr. Jonathan Wild and the chaſte Lætitia.

BUT to proceed with our Hiſtory: Fireblood having received this Letter, and promiſed on his Honour, as we have before hinted, to diſcharge his Embaſſy faithfully, went to viſit the fair Lætitia. Having opened the Letter, and read it, ſhe put on an Air of Diſdain, and told Mr. Fire- blood, ſhe could not conceive what Mr. Wild meant by troubling her with his Impertinence; ſhe begged him to carry the Letter back again, ſaying, had ſhe known from whom it came, ſhe would have been d——d before ſhe had opened it. Moreover, ſhe ſaid ſhe was not angry with him, nay, ſhe was ſorry ſo pretty a young Man ſhould be employed in ſuch an Errand. She accompanied theſe Words with ſo tender an Accent, and ſo wanton a Leer, that Fireblood, who was no backward Youth, began to take her by the Hand, and proceeded ſo warmly, that, to imitate his Actions with the Rapidity of our Narration, he in a few Minutes raviſhed this fair Creature, or at leaſt would have raviſhed her, if ſhe had not, by a timely Compliance, prevented him.

FIREBLOOD, after he had raviſhed as much as he could, returned to Wild, and acquainted him as far as any wiſe Man would, with what had paſt; concluding with many Praiſes of the young Lady's Beauty, with whom, he ſaid, if his Honour would have permitted him, he ſhould himſelf ſelf have fallen in Love; but, d——n him, if he would not ſooner be torn in Pieces by wild Horſes, than even think of injuring his Friend. And if he could be of any Service, he might command him to go to Lætitia when, and as often as he pleaſed.

THUS conſtituted were the Love-Affairs of our Hero, when his Father brought him Mr. Snap's Propoſal. The Reader muſt know very little of Love, or indeed of any thing elſe, if he requires any Information concerning the Reception which this Propoſal met with. Not guilty never ſounded ſweeter in the Ears of Culprit, nor a Reprieve to the Priſoner condemned, than did every Word of the old Gentleman in the Ears of our Hero. He gave his Father full Power to treat in his Name, and deſired nothing more than Expedition.

THE old People now met, and Snap, who had Information from his Daughter, of the violent Paſſion of her Lover, endeavoured to improve it to the beſt Advantage, and would have not only declined giving her any Fortune himſelf, but attempted to cheat her of what ſhe owed to the Liberality of her Relations, particularly of a Pint Silver Caudle Cup, the Gift of her Grandmother. However, the young Lady herſelf afterwards took Care to prevent him. As to the old Mr. Wild, he did not ſufficiently attend to all the Deſigns of Snap, as his Faculties were buſily employed in Deſigns of his own, to over-reach (or, as others expreſs it, to cheat) the ſaid Mr. Snap, by pretending to give his Son a whole Number for a Chair, when in Reality he was intitled to a third only.

WHILE Matters were thus ſettling between the old Folks, the young Lady agreed to admit Mr. Wild's Viſits. And, by Degrees, began to entertain him with all the Shew of Affection, which the great natural Reſerve of her Temper, and the greater artificial Reſerve of her Education would permit. At length every thing being agreed between their Parents, Settlements made, and the Lady's Fortune (to wit, Seventeen Pounds and nine Shillings in Money and Goods) paid down, the Day for

for their Nuptials was fixed, and they were celebrated accordingly.

MOST Hiſtories as well as Comedies end at this Period; the Hiſtorian and the Poet both concluding they have done enough for their Hero when they have married him; or intimating rather, that the reſt of his Life muſt be a dull Calm of Happineſs, very delightful indeed to paſs through, but ſomewhat inſipid to relate: And Matrimony in general muſt, I believe, without any Diſpute, be allowed to be this State of tranquil Felicity, ſo little concerned with Variety, that, like Saliſbury Plain, it affords only one Proſpect, a very pleaſant one it muſt be confeſt, but the ſame.

Now there was all the Probability imaginable, that this Contract would have proved of ſuch happy Note, both from the great Accompliſhments of the young Lady, and the truly ardent Paſſion of Mr. Wild; but whether it was that Nature and Fortune had great Deſigns for him to execute, and would not ſuffer his vaſt Abilities to be loſt loſt and ſunk in the Arms of a Wife, or whether neither Nature nor Fortune had any Hand in the Matter, is a Point I will not determine. Certain it is that this Match did not produce that ſerene State we have mentioned above, but reſembled the moſt turbulent and ruffled, rather than calm Sea.

I cannot here omit a Conjecture ingenious enough of a Friend of mine, who had a long Intimacy in the Wild Family. He hath often told me he fancied one Reaſon of the Diſſatisfactions which afterwards fell out between Wild and his Lady, aroſe from the Number of Gallants, to whom ſhe had before Marriage granted Favours; for ſays he, and indeed very probable it is too, the Lady might expect from her Huſband, what ſhe had before received from ſeveral, and being angry not to find one Man as good as ten, ſhe had, from that Indignation, taken thoſe Steps which we cannot perfectly juſtify.

From this Perſon I received the following Dialogue, which, he aſſured me, he had overheard, and taken down verbatim.

Jonathan.

MY Dear, I wish you would lie a little longer in Bed this Morning.

Lætitia.

INDEED I cannot: I am engaged to breakfast with Sir John.

Jonathan.

I don't know what Sir John doth so often at my House. I assure you I am uneasy eaſy at it; for though I have no Suſpicion of your Virtue, yet it may injure your Reputation in the Opinion of my Neighbours.

Lætitia.

I don't trouble my Head about my Neighbours; and they ſhall no more tell me what Company I am to keep than my Huſband ſhall.

Jonathan.

A good Wife would keep no Company which made her Huſband uneaſy.

Lætitia.

You might have found one of thoſe good Wives, Sir, if you had pleaſed, I had no Objection to it.

Jonathan.

I thought I had found one in you.

Lætitia.

You did! I am very much obliged to you for thinking me ſo poor-ſpirited a Creature; but I hope to convince you to the the contrary. What, I ſuppoſe you took me for a raw, ſenſeleſs Girl, who knew nothing what other married Women do!

Jonathan.

No Matter what I took you for: I have taken you for better and worſe.

Lætitia.

And at your own Deſire too? For, I am ſure, you never had mine. I ſhould not have broken my Heart if Mr. Wild had thought proper to beſtow himſelf on any other more happy Woman. ----Ha, ha.

Jonathan.

I hope, Madam, you don't imagine that was not in my Power, or that I married you out of any kind of Neceſſity.

Lætitia.

O no, Sir, I am convinced there are ſilly Women enough. And far be it from me to accuſe you of any Neceſſity for a Wife, I believe you could have very well been contented with the State of a Batchelor; but but that, you know, a Woman cannot tell beforehand.

Jonathan.

I can't gueſs what you would inſinuate; for I believe no Woman had ever leſs Reaſon to complain of her Huſband's Want of Fondneſs.

Lætitia.

THEN ſome, I am certain, have great Reaſon to complain of the Price they give for them. —— But I know better things. (Theſe Words to be ſpoken with a very great Air, and Toſs of the Head.)

Jonathan.

WELL, my Sweeting, I will make it impoſſible for you to wiſh me more fond. ——

Lætitia.

PRAY, Mr. Wild, none of this nauſeous Behaviour, nor thoſe odious Words. —— I wiſh you were fond! —— I aſſure you —— I don't know what you would pretend to inſinuate of me. —— I have no Wiſhes which miſbecome a virtuous Woman ——

No,

No, nor ſhould not, if I had married for Love. —— And eſpecially now when no body, I am ſure, can ſuſpect me of any ſuch thing. ——

Jonathan.

IF you did not marry for Love, why did you marry?

Lætitia.

BECAUSE it was convenient, and my Parents forced me.

Jonathan.

I hope, Madam, at leaſt, you will not tell me to my Face, you have made your Convenience of me.

Lætitia.

I have made nothing of you; nor do I deſire the Honour of making any thing of you.

Jonathan.

YES, you have made a Huſband of me.

No, you made your ſelf ſo; for I repeat once more, It was not my Deſire but your own.

Jonathan.

You ſhould think yourſelf obliged to me for that Deſire.

Lætitia.

La! Sir, you was not ſo ſingular in it; I was not in Deſpair. —— I have had other Offers, and better too.

Jonathan.

I wiſh you had accepted them with all my Heart.

Lætitia.

I muſt tell you, Mr. Wild, this is a very brutiſh Manner of treating a Woman, to whom you have ſuch Obligations; but I know how to deſpiſe it, and to deſpiſe you too for ſhewing it me. Indeed I am well enough paid for the fooliſh Preference I gave to you. I flattered myſelf that I ſhould

Jonathan.

D——N you, Madam, have not I more Reaſon to complain, when you tell me you married me for your Convenience only?

Lætitia.

VERY fine, truly. Is it Behaviour worthy a Man to ſwear at a Woman? Yet why ſhould I mention what comes from a Wretch whom I deſpiſe.

Jonathan.

DON'T repeat that Word ſo often. I deſpiſe you as heartily as you can me. And, to tell you a Truth, I married you for my Convenience likewiſe, to ſatisfy a Paſſion which I have now ſatisfied, and you may be d——d for any thing I care.

Jonathan.

BEGIN whenever you pleaſe, Madam; but, aſſure yourſelf, the Moment you lay aſide the Woman, I will treat you as ſuch no longer; and if the firſt Blow is yours, I promiſe you the laſt ſhall be mine.

Lætitia.

IT is impoſſible for two People to agree better; for I always deteſted your Perſon; and, as for any other Regard, you muſt be convinced I never could have any for you.

Jonathan.

WHY, then, ſince we are come to a right Underſtanding, as we are to live together, ſuppoſe we agreed, inſtead of quarrelling and abuſing, to be civil to each other.

CHAP. IX.

Observations on the foregoing Dialogue, together with a base Design on our Hero, which must be detested by every Lover of GREATNESS.

THUS did this Dialogue (which tho' we have termed it matrimonial, had indeed very little Savour of the Sweets of Matrimony in it) produce at last a Resolution more wise than strictly pious, and which, if they could have rigidly adhered to it, might have prevented some unpleasant Moments as well to our Hero as to his Serene Consort; but their Hatred was so very great and unaccountable, that they never could bear to see the least Composure in one another's Countenance, without attempting to ruffle it. This set them on so many Contrivances to plague and vex one another, that as their Proximity afforded them such frequent Opportunities of executing their malicious licious Purpoſes, that they ſeldom paſt one eaſy or quiet Day together.

AND this, Reader, and no other is the Cauſe of thoſe many Inquietudes, which thou muſt have obſerved to diſturb the Repoſe of ſome married Couples, who miſtake implacable Hatred for Indifference; for why ſhould Corvinus, who lives in a Round of Intrigue, and ſeldom doth, and never willingly would, dally with his Wife, endeavour to prevent her from the Satisfaction of an Intrigue in her Turn? Why doth Camilla refuſe a more agreeable Invitation abroad, only to expoſe her Huſband at his own Table at home? In ſhort, to mention no more Inſtances, whence can all the Quarrels, and Jealouſies, and Jars, proceed, in People who have no Love for each other, unleſs from that noble Paſſion abovementioned, that Deſire, according to my Lady Betty Modiſh, of curing each other of a Smile?

WE thought proper to give our Reader a ſhort Taſte of the domeſtic State of our Hero, the rather to ſhew him that GREAT

MEN are ſubject to the ſame Frailties and Inconveniencies in ordinary Life, with little Men, and that Heroes are really of the ſame Species with other human Creatures, notwithſtanding all the Pains they themſelves, or their Flatterers take to aſſert the contrary; and that they differ chiefly in the Immenſity of their GREATNESS, or as the Vulgar erroneouſly call it, Villainy. Now therefore, that we may not dwell too long on low Scenes, in a Hiſtory of this ſublime Kind, we ſhall return to Actions of a higher Note, and more ſuitable to our Purpoſe.

WHEN the Boy Hymen had with his lighted Torch driven the Boy Cupid out of Doors; that is to ſay, in common Phraſe, when the Violence of Mr. Wild's Paſſion (or rather Appetite) for the chaſte Lætitia, began to abate, he returned to viſit his Friend Heartfree, who was now in the Liberties of the Fleet, and had appeared to the Commiſſion of Bankruptcy againſt him, where he met with a leſs cold Reception than he himſelf had apprehended. Heartfree had long entertained Suſpicions of Wild,

Digitized by Google

Wild, but theſe Suſpicions had from time to time been confounded with Circumſtances, and principally ſmothered with that amazing Confidence, which was indeed the moſt ſtriking Virtue in our Hero. He was unwilling to condemn him, without certain Evidence, and laid hold on every probable Semblance to acquit him; but the Propoſal made at his laſt Viſit had ſo totally blackned his Character in this poor Man's Opinion, that it entirely fixed the wavering Scale, and he no longer doubted but that our Hero was one of the greateſt Villains in the World.

CIRCUMSTANCES of great Improbability often eſcape Men who devour a Story with greedy Ears; the Reader therefore cannot wonder that Heartfree, whoſe Paſſions were ſo variouſly concerned, firſt for the Fidelity, and ſecondly for the Safety of his Wife; and laſtly, who was ſo diſtracted with Doubt concerning the Conduct of his Friend, ſhould at his firſt Relation paſs unobſerved the Incident of his being committed to the Boat by the Captain of the Privateer, which he had not at the time of

of his telling it in the leaſt accounted for; but now when Heartfree came to reflect on the whole, and with a high Prepoſſeſſion againſt Wild, the Abſurdity of this Fact glared in his Eyes, and ſtruck him in the moſt ſenſible Manner. At length a Thought of great Horror ſuggeſted itſelf to his Imagination, and this was, Whether the whole was not a Fiction, and Wild, who was, as he had learn'd from his own Mouth, equal to any Undertaking how black ſoever, had not ſpirited away, robbed and murthered his Wife.

INTOLERABLE as this Apprehenſion was, he not only turned it round and examined it carefully in his own Mind, but acquainted young Friendly with it at their next Interview. Friendly, who deteſted Wild (from that Envy, probably, with which theſe GREAT CHARACTERS naturally inſpire low Fellows) encouraged theſe Suſpicions ſo much, that Heartfree reſolved to attach our Hero and carry him before a Magiſtrate.

THIS

THIS Reſolution had been ſometime taken, and Friendly with a Warrant and a Conſtable had with the utmoſt Diligence, ſearched ſeveral Days for our Hero; but whether it was that in Compliance with modern Cuſtom, he had retired to ſpend the Honey-Moon with his Bride, the only Moon indeed in which it is faſhionable or cuſtomary for the married Parties to have any Affection for each other; or perhaps his Habitation might for particular Reaſons be uſually kept a Secret: Like thoſe of ſome few GREAT MEN, whom unfortunately the Law hath left out of that reaſonable as well as honourable Proviſion, which it hath made for the Security of moſt GREAT MEN's Perſons.

BUT Wild reſolved to perform Works of Supererogation in the Way of Honour, and, tho' no Hero is obliged to anſwer the Challenge of my Lord Chief Juſtice, or indeed, of any other Magiſtrate; but may with unblemiſhed Reputation ſlide away from it; yet ſuch was the Bravery, ſuch the

the GREATNESS, the Magnanimity of Wild, that he appeared in Perſon to it.

INDEED Envy may ſay one Thing, which may leſſen the Glory of this Action, namely, that the ſaid Mr. Wild, knew nothing of the ſaid Warrant or Challenge; and as thou may'ſt be aſſured, Reader, that the malicious Fury will omit nothing which can any ways ſully ſo great a Character, ſo ſhe hath endeavoured to account for this ſecond Viſit of our Hero to his Friend Heartfree, from a very different Motive than that of aſſerting his own Innocence.

Mr. Wild with unprecedented Generosity visits his Friend Heartfree, and the ungrateful Reception he met with.

IT hath been said then, that Mr. Wild not being able on the strictest Examination to find in a certain Spot of human Nature called his own Heart, the least Grain of that pitiful low Quality called Honesty, had resolved, perhaps a little too generally, that there was no such thing. He therefore imputed the Resolution with which Mr. Heartfree had so positively refused to concern himself in Murther, either to a Fear of bloodying his Hands, or the Apprehension of a Ghost, or lest he should make an additional Example in that excellent Book called, God's Revenge against Murther; and doubted not but he would (at least in his present Necessity) agree without Scruple to a simple Robbery, especially where any considerable Booty should be proposed, poſed, and the Safety of the Attack plauſibly made appear; which, if he could prevail on him to undertake, he would immediately afterwards get him impeached, convicted, and hanged. He no ſooner therefore had diſcharged his Duties to Hymen, and heard that Heartfree had procured himſelf the Liberties of the Fleet, than he reſolved to viſit him, and propoſe a Robbery with all the Allurements of Profit, Eaſe and Safety.

THIS Propoſal was no ſooner made, than it was anſwered by Heartfree in the following Manner.

" I might have hoped the Anſwer which " I gave to your former Advice would have " prevented me from the Danger of re- " ceiving a ſecond Affront of this Kind. " An Affront I call it, and ſurely if it be ſo " to call a Man a Villain, it can be no leſs " to ſhew him you ſuppoſe him one. " barities and Iniquities committed by the " vile; or a worthleſs Acquiſition which ſuch
" as thou art can poſſeſs, can give or can rob

The former Part of this Speech occaſioned much yawning in our Hero, but the latter rouſed his Anger; and he was collecting his Rage to anſwer, when Friendly and the Conſtable, who had been ſummoned by Heartfree, on Wild's firſt Appearance, entred the Room, and ſeized the GREAT MAN juſt as his Wrath was burſting from his Lips.

THE Dialogue which now enſued, is not worth relating, Wild was ſoon acquainted with the Reaſon of this rough Treatment, and preſently conveyed before a Magiſtrate.

NOTWITHSTANDING the Doubts raiſed by Mr. Wild's Lawyer on his Examination, he inſiſting that the Proceeding was improper; for that a Writ de Homine Replegiando ſhould iſſue, and on the Return of that a Capias in Withernam, the Juſtice inclined to commitment, ſo that Wild was driven to other Methods for his Defence. He therefore acquainted the Juſtice, that there was a young Man likewiſe with him in the Boat, and begged that he might be ſent for, which Requeſt was accordingly granted, and the faithful Achates (Mr. Fireblood) was ſoon produced to bear Teſtimony for his Friend, which he did with ſo much becoming Zeal, and went through his Examination with ſuch Coherence, (tho' he was forced to collect his Evidence from the Hints given him by Wild in the Preſence of the Juſtice and the Accuſers,) that, as here was direct Evidence againſt mere Presumption, our Hero was most honourably acquitted, and poor Heartfree was charged by the Justice, the Audience, and all others, who afterwards heard the Story, with the blackest Ingratitude, in attempting to take away the Life of a Man, to whom he had such eminent Obligations.

LEST so vast an Effort of Friendship as this of Fireblood's should too violently surprize the Reader in this degenerate Age; it may be proper to inform him, that besides the Ties of Engagement in the same Employ, another nearer and stronger Alliance subsisted between our Hero and this Youth, which latter was just departed from the Arms of the lovely Lætitia, when he received her Husband's Message: An Instance which may also serve to justify those strict Intercourses of Love and Acquaintance, which so commonly subsist in modern History between the Husband and Gallant, displaying the vast Force of Friendship, contracted by this more honourable than legal Alliance, which is thought to be at present one of the strongest Bonds of Amity be-between GREAT MEN, and the moſt reputable as well as eaſy Way to Preferment.

FOUR Months had now paſſed ſince Heartfree's firſt Confinement, and his Affairs had begun to wear a more benign Aſpect; but they were a good deal injured by this Attempt on Wild (ſo dangerous is any Attack on a GREAT MAN) ſeveral of his Neighbours, and particularly one or two of his own Trade, induſtriouſly endeavouring, from their bitter Animoſity againſt ſuch Kind of Iniquity, to ſpread and exaggerate his Ingratitude as much as poſſible; not in the leaſt ſcrupling, in the violent Ardour of their Indignation, to add ſome ſmall Circumſtances of their own Knowledge of the many Obligations conferred on Heartfree by Wild. To all theſe Scandals he quietly ſubmitted, comforting himſelf in the Conſciouſneſs of his own Innocence, and confiding in Time, the ſure Friend of Juſtice, to acquit him.

CHAP. XI.

A Scheme ſo deeply laid that it ſhames all the Politics of this our Age; with Digreſſion and Sub-digreſſion.

WILD having now, to the Hatred he bore Heartfree on Account of thoſe Injuries he had done him, an additional Spur from this Injury received; (for ſo it appeared to him, who no more than the moſt ignorant, conſidered how truly he deſerved it) applied his utmoſt Induſtry to accompliſh the Ruin of one whoſe very Name ſounded odious in his Ears; when luckily a Scheme aroſe in his Imagination, which not only promiſed to effect it ſecurely; but, (which pleaſed him moſt) by Means of the Miſchief he had already done him; and which would at once load him with the Imputation of having committed what he himſelf had done for him, and would bring on him the ſevereſt Puniſhment for a Fact, of which he was not only inno-innocent, but had already ſo greatly ſuffered by. And this was no other than to charge him with having conveyed away his Wife, with his moſt valuable Effects, in order to defraud his Creditors.

HE no ſooner ſtarted this Thought than he immediately reſolved on putting it in Execution. What remained to conſider was only the Quomodo, and the Perſon or Tool to be employed; for the Stage of the World differs from that in Drury-Lane principally in this; that whereas on the latter, the Hero, or chief Figure, is almoſt continually before your Eyes, whilſt the Under-actors are not ſeen above once in an Evening; now, on the former, the Hero, or GREAT MAN, is always behind the Curtain, and ſeldom or never appears, or doth any thing in his own Perſon. He doth indeed, in this grand Drama, rather perform the Part of the Prompter, and inſtructs the well-dreſt Figures, who are ſtrutting in public on the Stage, what to ſay and do. To ſay the Truth, a Puppet-ſhow will illuſtrate our Meaning better, where it is the Maſter of the Show (the GREAT MAN) who dances and moves every thing; whether it be the King of Muſcovy, or whatever other Potentate, alias Puppet, which we behold on the Stage; but he himſelf wiſely keeps out of Sight; for ſhould he once appear, the whole Motion would be at an End. Not that any one is ignorant of his being there, or ſuppoſes that the Puppets are not mere Sticks of Wood, and he himſelf the ſole Mover; but as this (tho' every one knows it) doth not appear viſibly, i. e. to their Eyes, no one is aſhamed of conſenting to be impoſed upon; of helping on the Drama, calling the ſeveral Sticks or Puppets by the Names which the Maſter hath allotted to them, and aſſigning to each the Character which the GREAT MAN is pleaſed they ſhall move in, or rather in which he himſelf is pleaſed to move them.

IT would be to ſuppoſe thee, gentle Reader, one of very little Knowledge in this World, to imagine thou haſt never ſeen ſome of theſe Puppet-Shews, which are ſo frequently acted on the GREAT Stage; but though thou ſhouldſt have reſided ſided all thy Days in thoſe remote Parts of this Iſland, which GREAT Men ſeldom viſit; yet, if thou haſt any Penetration, thou muſt have had ſome Occaſions to admire both the Solemnity of Countenance in the Actor, and the Gravity in the Spectator, while ſome of thoſe Farces are carried on, which are acted almoſt daily in every Village in the Kingdom. He muſt have a very deſpicable Opinion of Mankind indeed, who can conceive them to be impoſed on as often as they appear to be ſo. The Truth is, they are in the ſame Situation with the Readers of Romances; who, though they know the whole to be one entire Fiction, nevertheleſs agree to be deceived; and as theſe find Amuſement, ſo do the others find Eaſe and Convenience in this Concurrence. But this being a Sub-digreſſion, I return to my Digreſſion.

A GREAT MAN ought to do his Buſineſs by others; to employ Hands, as we have before ſaid, to his Purpoſes, and keep himſelf as much behind the Curtain as poſſible; and though it muſt be acknowledged that two very GREAT Men, whoſe Names will be both recorded in Hiſtory, did, in former Times, come forth themſelves on the Stage; and did hack and hew, and lay each other moſt cruelly open to the Diverſion of the Spectators; yet this muſt be mentioned rather as an Example of Avoidance, than Imitation, and is to be aſcribed to the Number of thoſe Inſtances which ſerve to evince the Truth of theſe Maxims: Nemo mortalium omnibus horis ſapit. Ira furor brevis eſt, &c.

CHAP. XII.

Elogiums on Conſtables, &c. And new Inſtances of Friendly's Folly.

TO return to my Hiſtory, which, having reſted itſelf a little, is now ready to proceed on its Journey: Fireblood was the Perſon choſen by Wild for this Service. He had, on the late Occaſion, experienced the Talents of this Youth for a good round Perjury. He immediately, therefore, found him out, and propoſed it to

to him, and, receiving his inſtant Aſſent, they conſulted together, and ſoon framed an Evidence, which, being communicated to one of the moſt bitter and ſevere Creditors of Heartfree, by him laid before a Magiſtrate, and atteſted by the Oath of Fireblood, the Juſtice granted his Warrant; and Heartfree was accordingly apprehended and brought before him.

WHEN the Officers came for this poor Wretch, they found him meanly diverting himſelf with his little Children, the youngeſt of whom ſat on his Knees, and the eldeſt was playing at a little Diſtance from him with Friendly. The Conſtable, who was a very good ſort of a Man, but one very laudably ſevere in his Office, after acquainting Heartfree with his Errand, bad him come along and be d——d, and leave thoſe little Baſtards; for ſo, he ſaid, he ſuppoſed they were, for a Legacy to the Pariſh. Heartfree was much ſurprized at hearing there was a Warrant for Felony againſt him; but he ſhewed leſs Concern than Friendly did in his Countenance. The eldeſt Daughter, when ſhe ſaw the Conſtable ble lay hold on her Father, immediately quitted her Play, and, running to him, and burſting into Tears, cry'd out: You ſhall not hurt poor Papa. One of the other Ruffians offered to take the little one rudely from his Knees; but Heartfree ſtarted up, and, catching the Fellow by the Collar, daſhed his Head ſo violently againſt the Wall, that, had he had any Brains, he might poſſibly have loſt them by the Blow.

THE Conſtable, like moſt of thoſe heroic Spirits who inſult Men in Adverſity, had ſome Prudence mixt with his Zeal for Juſtice. Seeing, therefore, this rough Treatment of his Companion, he began to purſue more gentle Methods, and very civilly deſired Mr. Heartfree to go with him, ſeeing he was an Officer, and obliged to execute his Warrant; that he was ſorry for his Misfortune, and hoped he would be acquitted. The other anſwered, he ſhould patiently ſubmit to the Laws of his Country, and would attend him whither he was ordered to conduct him; then, taking Leave of his Children with a tender Kiſs, he he recommended them to the Care of Friendly; who promiſed to ſee them ſafe Home, and then to attend him at the Juſtice's, whoſe Name and Abode he had learnt of the Conſtable.

THIS latter arrived at the Magiſtrate's Houſe, juſt as he had ſigned the Mittimus againſt his Friend; for the Evidence of Fireblood was ſo clear and ſtrong, and the Juſtice was ſo incenſed againſt Heartfree, and ſo convinced of his Guilt, that he would hardly hear him ſpeak in his own Defence, which the Reader perhaps, when he hears the Evidence againſt him, will be leſs inclined to cenſure: For this Witneſs depoſed, "that he had been, by Heartfree "himſelf, employed to carry the Orders "of Embezzling to Wild, in order to be "delivered to his Wife; that he had been "afterwards preſent with Wild and her at "the Inn, when they took Coach for Har-"wich, where ſhe ſhewed him the Caſket "of Jewels, and deſired him to tell her "Huſband, that ſhe had fully executed his "Command.

WHEN

Digitized by Google

WHEN Friendly found the Juſtice obdurate, and that all he could ſay had no Effect, nor was it any way poſſible for Heartfree to eſcape being committed to Newgate, he reſolved to accompany him thither: Where, when they arrived, the Keeper would have confined Heartfree (he having no Money) amongſt the common Felons; but Friendly would not permit it, and advanced every Shilling he had in his Pocket, to procure a Room in the Preſs-Yard for his Friend.

THEY ſpent that Day together, and, in the Evening, the Priſoner diſmiſſed his Friend, deſiring him, after many Thanks for his Fidelity, to be comforted on his Account. "I know not, ſays he, how far "GOD may permit the Malice of my E-"nemies to prevail. But whatever my "Sufferings are, I am convinced my Inno-"cence will ſomewhere be rewarded. If, "therefore, any fatal Accident ſhould hap-"pen to me, (for he who is in the Hands "of Perjury, may apprehend the worſt) "my dear Friendly, be a Father to my "poor

"poor Children," at which Words the Tears guſhed from his Eyes. The other begged him not to admit any ſuch Apprehenſions; for that he would employ his utmoſt Diligence in his Service, and doubted not but to ſubvert any villainous Deſign laid for his Deſtruction, and to make his Innocence appear to the World as white as it was in his own Opinion.

WE cannot help mentioning a Circumſtance here, though we doubt it will appear very unnatural and incredible to our Reader; which is, that, notwithſtanding the former Character and Behaviour of Heartfree, this Story of his embezzling was ſo far from ſurprizing his Neighbours, that many of them declared they expected no better from him. Some were aſſured he could pay forty Shillings in the Pound, if he would. Others had overheard Hints formerly paſs between him and Mrs. Heartfree, which had given them Suſpicions. And, what is moſt aſtoniſhing of all is, that many of thoſe who had before cenſured him for an extravagant heedleſs Fool, now now no leſs confidently abuſed him for a cunning, tricking, avaricious Knave.

CHAP. XIII.

Something concerning Fireblood, which will ſurprize; and ſomewhat touching one of the Miſs Snaps, which will greatly concern the Reader.

HOWEVER, notwithſtanding all thoſe Cenſures abroad, and in Deſpight of all his Misfortunes at home, Heartfree in Newgate enjoyed a quiet, undiſturbed Repoſe; while our Hero, nobly diſdaining Reſt, lay ſleepleſs all Night; partly from the Apprehenſions of Mrs. Heartfree's Return before he had executed his Scheme; and partly from a Suſpicion leſt Fireblood ſhould betray him; of whoſe Infidelity he had, nevertheleſs, no other Cauſe to maintain any Fear, but from his knowing him to be an accompliſhed Raſcal, as the Vulgar term it, a complete GREAT Man in our Language. And indeed, to confeſs the Truth, theſe Doubts were not without ſome Foundation; for the very ſame Thought unluckily entred the Head of that noble Youth, who conſidered, whether he might not poſſibly ſell himſelf for ſome Advantage to the other Side, as he had yet no Promiſe from Wild; but this was, by the Sagacity of the latter, prevented in the Morning with a Profuſion of Promiſes, which ſhewed him to be of the moſt generous Temper in the World, with which Fireblood was extremely well ſatisfied; and made uſe of ſo many Proteſtations of his Faithfulneſs, that he convinced Wild of the Injuſtice of his Suſpicions.

AT this Time an Accident happened, which, though not immediately affecting our Hero, we cannot avoid relating, as it occaſioned great Confuſion in his Family, as well as in the Family of Snap. It is indeed a Calamity highly to be lamented, when it ſtains untainted Blood, and happens to an honourable Houſe. An Injury never to be repaired. A Blot never to be wiped out.

out. A Sore never to be healed. To detain my Reader no longer: Miſs Theodoſia Snap was now ſafely delivered of a Male-Infant, the Product of an Amour which that beautiful (O that I could ſay, virtuous) Creature had with the Count.

MR. Wild and his Lady were at Breakfaſt, when Mr. Snap, with all the Agonies of Deſpair both in his Voice and Countenance, brought them this melancholy News. Our Hero, who had (as we have ſaid) wonderful Good-nature when his GREATNESS or Intereſt was not concerned, inſtead of reviling his Siſter-in-Law, aſked with a Smile: "Who was the Fa-"ther?" But the chaſte Lætitia, we repeat the chaſte, for well did ſhe now deſerve that Epithet; received it in another Manner. She fell into the utmoſt Fury at the Relation, reviled her Siſter in the bittereſt Terms, and vowed ſhe would never ſee nor ſpeak to her more. Then burſt into Tears, and lamented over her Father, that ſuch a Diſhonour ſhould ever happen to him and herſelf. At length ſhe fell ſeverely on her Huſband, for the light Treatment Treatment which he gave this fatal Accident. She told him, he was unworthy of the Honour he enjoyed, of marrying into a chaſte Family. That ſhe looked on it as an Affront to her Virtue. That if he had married one of the naughty Huſſies of the Town, he could not have behaved to her in a worſe Manner. She concluded with deſiring her Father to make an Example of the Slut, and turn her out of Doors; for that ſhe would not otherwiſe enter his Houſe, being reſolved never to ſet her Foot within the ſame Threſhold with the Trollop, whom ſhe deteſted ſo much the more, becauſe (which was perhaps true) ſhe was her own Siſter.

So violent, and indeed ſo outragious was this chaſte Lady's Love of Virtue, that ſhe could not forgive a ſingle Slip (indeed the only one Theodoſia had ever made) in her own Siſter, in a Siſter who loved her, and to whom ſhe owed a thouſand Obligations.

PERHAPS the Severity of Mr. Snap, who greatly felt the Injury done to the Honour of his Family, would have relented, had not the Pariſh-Officers been extremely preſſing on this Occaſion, and, for want of Security, conveyed the unhappy young Lady to a Place, the Name of which, for the Honour of the Snaps, to whom our Hero was ſo nearly allied, we bury in eternal Oblivion; where ſhe ſuffered ſo much Correction for her Crime, that the good-natured Reader of the Male kind may be inclined to compaſſionate her, at leaſt to imagine ſhe was ſufficiently puniſhed for a Fault, which, with Submiſſion to the chaſte Lætitia, and all other ſtrictly virtuous Ladies, it ſhould be either leſs criminal in a Woman to commit, or more ſo in a Man to ſolicit her to it.

But to return to our Hero, who was a living and ſtrong Inſtance, that human Greatness and Happineſs are not always inſeparable. He was under a continual Alarm of Frights, and Fears, and Jealouſies. He thought every Man he beheld wore a Knife for his Throat, and a Pair of Sciſſars for his Purſe. As for his own Gang particularly, he was throughly convinced vinced there was not a ſingle Man amongſt them, who would not, for the Value of five Shillings, bring him to the Gallows. Theſe Apprehenſions ſo conſtantly broke his Reſt, and kept him ſo aſſiduouſly on his Guard, to fruſtrate and circumvent any Deſigns which might be forming againſt him; that his Condition, to any other than the glorious Eye of Ambition, might ſeem rather deplorable, than the Object of Envy or Deſire.

CHAP. XIV.

In which our Hero makes a Speech well worthy to be celebrated; and the Behaviour of one of the Gang perhaps more unnatural than any other Part of this Hiſtory.

THERE was in the Gang a Man named Blueſkin. One of thoſe Merchants who trade in dead Oxen, Sheep, &c. in ſhort, what the Vulgar call a Butcher. This Gentleman had two Qualities of a GREAT Man, viz. undaunted Courage, and an abſolute Contempt of thoſe ridiculous Diſtinctions of Meum and Tuum. The common Forms of exchanging Property by Trade ſeemed to him too tedious; he therefore reſolved to quit the mercantile Profeſſion, and, falling acquainted with ſome of Mr. Wild's People, he provided himſelf with Arms, and enliſted of the Gang. In which he behaved for ſome time with great Decency and Order, and ſubmitted to accept ſuch Share of the Booty with the reſt, as our Hero allotted him.

BUT this Subſerviency agreed ill with his Temper; for we ſhould have before remembered a third heroic Quality, namely, Ambition, which was no inconſiderable Part of his Compoſition. One Day, therefore, having robbed a Gentleman at Windſor of a Gold-Watch; which, on its being advertiſed in the News-Paper, with a conſiderable Reward, was demanded of him by Wild, he peremptorily refuſed to deliver it.

" other People." At which Words he departed in a fierce Mood, and repaired to the Tavern uſed by the Gang, where he had appointed to meet ſome of his Acquaintance, whom he informed of what had paſſed between him and Wild, and adviſed them all to follow his Example; which they all readily agreed to, and Mr. Wild's D——tion was the univerſal Toaſt: In drinking Bumpers to which, they had finiſhed a large Bowl of Punch, when a Conſtable, with a numerous Attendance, and Wild at their Head, entered the Room, and ſeized on Blueſkin, whom his Companions, when they ſaw our Hero, did not dare attempt to reſcue. The Watch was found upon him, which, together with Wild's Information, was more than ſufficient to commit him to Newgate.

IN the Evening, Wild, and the reſt of thoſe who had been drinking with Blueſkin, met at the Tavern, where nothing was to be ſeen but the profoundeſt Submiſſion to their Leader. They vilified and abuſed Blueſkin as much as they had before abuſed our Hero, and now repeated the ſame Toaſt, Toaſt, only changing the Name of Wild into that of Blueſkin. All agreeing with Wild, that the Watch found in his Pocket, and which muſt be a fatal Evidence againſt him, was a juſt Judgment on his Diſobedience and Revolt.

THUS did this GREAT Man, by a reſolute and timely Example (for he went directly to the Juſtice when Blueſkin left him) quell one of the moſt dangerous Conſpiracies which could poſſibly ariſe in a Gang; and which, had it been permitted one Day's Growth, would inevitably have ended in his Deſtruction; ſo much doth it behoove GREAT Men and Prigs to be eternally on their Guard, and expeditious in the Execution of their Purpoſes; while none but weak and honeſt Men can indulge themſelves in Remiſſneſs or Repoſe.

THE Achates, Fireblood, had been preſent at both theſe Meetings; but though he had a little too haſtily concurred in curſing his Friend, and vowing his Perdition; yet now he ſaw all that Scheme diſſolved, he returned to his Integrity; of which he gave gave an inconteſtable Proof, by informing Wild of the Meaſures which had been concerted againſt him. In which, he ſaid, he had pretended to acquieſce, in order the better to betray them; but this, as he afterwards confeſſed on his Death-Bed, i. e. in the Cart at Tyburn, was only a Copy of his Countenance; for that he was, at that Time, as ſincere and hearty in his Oppoſition to Wild as any of his Companions.

OUR Hero, however, deſired him to keep this a ſevere Secret; for, he ſaid, as they had ſeen their Errors, and repented, nothing was more noble than Forgiveneſs. But though he was pleaſed modeſtly to aſcribe this to his Lenity, it really aroſe from much more noble and political Principles. He conſidered that it would be dangerous to attempt the Puniſhment of ſo many; beſides, he flattered himſelf that Fear would keep them in Order; and indeed he concluded, that Fireblood had told him nothing more than he knew before, viz. that they were all complete Prigs, whom he was to govern by their Fears, and in whom he was to place no more Confi-

Confidence than was neceſſary, and to watch them with the utmoſt Caution and Circumſpection; for a Rogue, he wiſely ſaid, was like Gunpowder, which, whoever uſes, muſt do it very cautiouſly, leſt it blow up himſelf, inſtead of executing his miſchievous Purpoſe againſt ſome other Perſon or Animal.

We will now repair to Newgate, it being the Place where moſt of the GREAT Men of this Hiſtory are haſtening as faſt as poſſible; and, to confeſs the Truth, it is a Caſtle very far from being an improper, or miſbecoming Habitation for any GREAT Man whatever. And as this Scene will continue during the Reſidue of our Hiſtory, we ſhall open it with a new Book,; and ſhall, therefore, take this Opportunity of cloſing our third.

HISTORY

LIFE of the late

Mr. JONATHAN WILD the Great.

BOOK IV.

CHAP. I.

A Sentiment of the Ordinary's, worthy to be written in Letters of Gold; a very extraordinary Inſtance of Folly in Friendly; and a dreadful Accident which befel our Hero.

HEARTFREE had not been long in Newgate before his frequent Converſation with his Children, and other Inſtances of a good Heart, which betrayed themthemſelves in his Actions and Converſation, poſſeſſed all about him that he was one of the ſillieſt Fellows in the Univerſe. The Ordinary himſelf, a very ſagacious as well as worthy Perſon, declared that he was a curſed Rogue, but no Conjurer.

WHAT indeed might induce the former, i. e. the roguiſh Part of this Opinion in the Ordinary was a wicked Sentiment which Heartfree one Day diſcloſed in Converſation, and which we, who are truly Orthodox, will not pretend to juſtify, viz. That he believed a ſincere Turk would be ſaved. To this the good Man, with becoming Zeal and Indignation, anſwered, I know not what may become of a ſincere Turk, but if this be your Perſuaſion, I pronounce it impoſſible you ſhould be ſaved. No, Sir, ſo far from a ſincere Turk's being within the Pale of Salvation, neither will any ſincere Preſbyterian, Anabaptiſt, nor Quaker whatever, be ſaved.

BUT neither did the one nor the other Part of this Character prevail on Friendly to abandon his old Maſter. He ſpent his whole whole time with him, except only thoſe Hours when he was abſent for his Sake, in procuring Evidence for him againſt his Trial, which was now ſhortly to come on. Indeed this young Man was the only Comfort, beſides a clear Conſcience, and the Hopes beyond the Grave, which this poor Wretch had; for the Sight of his Children was like one of thoſe alluring Pleaſures which Men in ſome Diſeaſes indulge themſelves often fatally in, which at once flatter and heighten their Malady.

FRIENDLY being one Day preſent while Heartfree was, with Tears in his Eyes, embracing his eldeſt Daughter, and lamenting the hard Fate to which he feared he ſhould be obliged to leave her, ſpoke to him thus. " I have long obſerved with " Admiration, thou excellent Man, the " Magnanimity with which you go thro' " your own Misfortunes, and the ſteady " Countenance with which you look on " Death. I have obſerved that all your A- " gonies ariſe from the Thoughts of parting " with your Children, and leaving them " in a diſtreſt Condition; now, tho' I hope " all

" all theſe Fears will prove ill-grounded,
" yet, that I may relieve you as much as " poſſible from them, be aſſured, that as
" nothing can give me more real Miſery,
" than to obſerve ſo tender and loving a " Concern in a Maſter, to whoſe Good" neſs I owe ſo many Obligations, and " whom I ſo ſincerely love, ſo nothing
" can afford me equal Pleaſure with my con" tributing to leſſen or to remove it. Be " convinced, therefore, if you can place
" any Confidence in my Promiſe, that I " will employ my little Fortune, which
" you know to be not entirely incon" ſiderable, in the Support of this " your little Family. Should any Misfor" tune, which I pray God avert, happen
" to you before you have better provided
" for theſe little ones, I will be myſelf
" their Father, nor ſhall either of them ever " know Diſtreſs, if it be any way in my " Power to prevent it. Your youngeſt daugh" ter I will provide for, and as for my lit" tle Prattler, your eldeſt, as I never yet
" thought of any Woman for a Wife, I " will receive her as ſuch at your Hands;
" nor will I ever relinquiſh her for an" other."

" ther." Heartfree flew to his Friend, and embraced him with Raptures of Acknowledgments. He vowed to him that he had eaſed every anxious Thought of his Mind but one, and that he muſt carry with him out of the World. " O Friendly, " (cried he) it is my Concern for that beſt " of Women, whom I hate myſelf for " having ever cenſured in my Opinion. O " Friendly, thou didſt know her Good- " neſs, yet, ſure her perfect Character none " but myſelf was ever acquainted with. She " had every perfection both of Mind and " Body, which Heaven hath indulged to " her whole Sex, and enjoyed all in a higher " Excellence than Nature ever ſuffered an- " other to poſſeſs a ſingle Virtue. Can I bear " the Loſs of ſuch a Woman? Can I bear " the Apprehenſions of what Miſchiefs that " Villain may have done to her, of which " Death is perhaps the lighteſt?" Friendly gently interrupted him as ſoon as he ſaw any Opportunity, endeavouring to comfort him on this Head likewiſe, by magnifying every Circumſtance which could poſſibly afford any Hopes of his ſeeing her again.

By this kind of Behaviour, in which the young Man exemplified ſo uncommon an Height of Friendſhip, he had ſoon obtained in the Caſtle the Character of as odd and ſilly a Fellow as his Maſter. Indeed, they were both the By-word, Laughing-ſtock, and Contempt of the whole Place.

The Seſſions now came on at the Old Baily. The Grand Jury at Hicks's-Hall had found the Bill of Indictment againſt Heartfree, and on the ſecond Day of the Seſſions he was brought to his Trial; where, notwithſtanding the utmoſt Efforts of Friendly, and of the honeſt old Female Servant, the Circumſtances of the Fact corroborating the Evidence of Fireblood, as well as that of Wild, who counterfeited the moſt artful Reluctance at appearing againſt his old Friend Heartfree, the Jury found the Priſoner guilty.

Wild had now accompliſhed his Scheme; for as to what remained, it was certainly unavoidable, ſeeing that Heartfree was entirely void of Intereſt with the Great, and and was beſides convicted on a Statute, the Infringers of which could hope no Pardon.

THE Cataſtrophe, to which our Hero had reduced this Wretch, was ſo wonderful an Effort of GREATNESS, that it probably made Fortune envious of her own Darling; but whether it was from this Envy, or only from that known Inconſtancy and Weakneſs ſo often and judiciouſly remarked in that Lady's Temper, who frequently lifts Men to the Summit of human GREATNESS, only certain it is, ſhe now began to meditate Miſchief againſt Wild, who ſeems to have come to that Period, at which all the Heroes and GREAT MEN of Antiquity have arrived, and which ſhe was reſolved they never ſhould tranſcend. In ſhort, there ſeems to be a certain Meaſure of Miſchief and Iniquity, which every GREAT MAN is to fill up, and then Fortune looks on him of no more Uſe than a Silk-Worm whoſe Bottom is ſpun, and deſerts him. For Mr.

Blueſkin being convicted the ſame Day of Robbery, by our Hero, an Unkindneſs, which tho' he had drawn on himſelf and neceſſitated him to, he took greatly amiſs; as Wild was ſtanding near him, with that Diſregard and Indifference which GREAT MEN are too careleſsly inclined to have for thoſe whom they have ruined; Blueſkin privily drawing a Knife, thruſt the ſame into the Body of our Hero with ſuch Violence, that all who ſaw it concluded he had done his Buſineſs. And indeed, had not Fortune, not ſo much out of Love to our Hero, as from a fixed Reſolution to accompliſh a certain Purpoſe of which we have formerly given a Hint, carefully placed his Guts out of the Way, he muſt have fallen a Sacrifice to the Wrath of his Enemy, which, as he ſaid, he did not deſerve; for had he been contented to have robbed and only ſubmitted to give him the Booty, he might have ſtill continued ſafe and un-impeached in the Gang; but ſo it was, that the Knife miſſing thoſe noble Parts (the nobleſt of many) the Guts, perforated only the hollow of his Belly, and cauſed no other Harm than an immoderate Effuſion of Blood, of which, tho' tho' it at preſent weakened him, he ſoon after recovered.

THIS Accident, however, was in the End attended with worſe Conſequences: For as very few People (thoſe greateſt of all Men, abſolute Princes, excepted) attempt to cut the Thread of human Life, like the Fatal Siſters, merely out of Wantonneſs and for their Diverſion, but rather by ſo doing propoſe to themſelves the Acquiſition of ſome future Good, or the avenging ſome paſt Evil; and as the former of theſe Motives did not appear probable, it put inquiſitive Perſons on examining into the latter. Now, as the vaſt Schemes of Wild, when they were diſcovered, however GREAT in their Nature, ſeemed to ſome Perſons like the Projects of moſt other GREAT MEN, rather to be calculated for the Glory of the GREAT MAN himſelf, than to redound to the general Good of Society; deſigns began to be laid by ſeveral of thoſe who thought it principally their Duty to put a Stop to the future Progreſs of our Hero, and a learned Judge particularly, a great Enemy to this kind of GREATNESS, procured a Clauſe in an Act of Parliament as a Trap for Wild, which he ſoon after fell into. By this Law it was made Capital in a Prig to ſteal with the Hands of other People. A Law ſo plainly calculated for the Deſtruction of all Priggiſh GREATNESS, that it was indeed impoſſible for our Hero to avoid it.

CHAP. II.

A ſhort Hint concerning popular Ingratitude. Mr. Wild's Arrival in the Caſtle, with other Occurrences to be found in no other Hiſtory.

IF we had any Leiſure, we would here digreſs a little on that Ingratitude, which ſo many Writers have obſerved in all free Governments towards their GREAT MEN; who, while they have been conſulting the Good of the Public, by raiſing their own GREATNESS, in which the whole Body (as the Kingdom of France thinks itſelf in the Glory of their Grand Monarch) was ſo deeply concerned, have been ſometimes ſacrificed crificed by thoſe very People for whoſe Glory the ſaid GREAT MEN were ſo induſtriouſly at work: And this from a fooliſh Zeal for a certain ridiculous imaginary Thing called Liberty, to which GREAT MEN are obſerved to have a great Animoſity.

THIS Law had been promulgated a very little Time, when Mr. Wild, having received from ſome dutiful Members of the Gang, a valuable Piece of Goods, did, for a Conſideration ſomewhat ſhort of its original Price, re-convey it to the right Owner; for which Fact being ungratefully informed againſt by the ſaid Owner, he was ſurprized in his own Houſe, and being over-power'd by Numbers, was hurried before a Magiſtrate, and by him committed to that Caſtle, which, ſuitable as it is to GREATNESS, we do not chuſe to name too often in our Hiſtory, and where many GREAT MEN, at this Time, happened to be aſſembled.

THE Governor, or as the Law more honourably calls him, Keeper of this Caſtle, having been Mr. Wild's old Friend and Acquaintance, made the latter greatly ſatisfied with the Place of his Confinement, as he promiſed himſelf not only a kind Reception and handſome Accommodation there, but even to obtain his Liberty from him, if he thought it neceſſary to deſire it: But alaſs! he was deceived, his old Friend knew him no longer, and refuſing to ſee him, ordered the Lieutenant Governor to inſiſt on as high Garniſh for Fetters, and as exorbitant a Price for Lodging, as if he had had a fine Gentleman in Cuſtody for Murther, or as if he had received an Intimation from a certain Place to uſe all the Severity imaginable to his Priſoner.

To confeſs a melancholy Truth, it is a Circumſtance much to be lamented; that there is no abſolute Dependence on the Friendſhip of GREAT MEN. An Obſervation which hath been frequently made by thoſe who have lived in Courts or in Newgate, or in any other Place ſet apart for the Habitation of the ſaid GREAT MEN.

THE ſecond Day of his Confinement he was greatly ſurprized at receiving a Viſit from from his Wife; and much more ſo, when, inſtead of a Countenance ready to inſult him, the only Motive to which he could aſcribe her Preſence, he ſaw the Tears trickling down her lovely Cheeks. He embraced her with the utmoſt Marks of Affection, and declared he could hardly regret his Confinement, ſince it had produced ſuch an Inſtance of the Happineſs he enjoyed in her, whoſe Fidelity to him on this Occaſion, would, he believed, make him the Envy of moſt Huſbands, even in Newgate. He then begged her to dry her Eyes, and be comforted; for that Matters might go better with him than ſhe expected. " No, no, (ſays ſhe) I am cer-

At which Words ſhe burſt into Tears. He could not then forbear chiding her for this unneceſſary Concern on his Account, and begged her not to trouble him any more. She anſwered with ſome Spirit, " On your Account, and " be d——d to you! WILD had ſcarce recovered himſelf from the Uneaſineſs into which this unwelcome Viſit, proceeding from the diſagreeable Fondneſs of his Wife, had thrown him, than the faithful Achates appeared. The Preſence of this Youth was indeed a Cordial to his Spirits. He received him with open Arms, and expreſſed the utmoſt Satisfaction in the Fidelity of his Friendſhip, which ſo far exceeded the Faſhion of the Times, and ſaid many Things, which we have forgot, on the Occaſion; but we remember they all tended to the Praiſe of Fireblood, whoſe Modeſty, at length, put a Stop to the Torrent of Compliments, by aſſerting he had done no more than his Duty, and that he ſhould have deteſted himſelf, could he have forſaken his Friend in his Adverſity, and after many Proteſtations, that he came the Moment he heard of his Misfortune, he aſked him if he could be of any Service. Wild anſwered, ſince he had ſo kindly propoſed that Queſtion, he muſt ſay he ſhould be obliged to him, if he could lend him a few Guineas; for that he was very feedy. Fireblood replied, that he was greatly unhappy in not having it then in his Power, adding many hearty Oaths, that he had not a Farthing of Money in his Pocket, which was, indeed, ſtrictly true; for he had only a Bank-Note which he had that Evening purloined from a Gentleman in the Playhouſe-Paſſage. He then aſked for his Wife, to whom, to ſpeak truly, the Viſit was intended, her Confinement being the Misfortune of which he had juſt heard; for, as for that of Mr. Wild himſelf, he had known it from the firſt, without ever intending to trouble him with his Company. Being informed therefore of the Viſit which had had lately happened, he reproved Wild for his cruel Treatment of that good Creature; then taking as ſudden Leave as he civilly could of the Gentleman, he haſtned to comfort his Lady, who received him with great Kindneſs.

CHAP. III.

Curious Anecdotes relating to the Hiſtory of Newgate.

THERE reſided in the Caſtle at the ſame Time with Mr. Wild, one Roger Johnſon, a very GREAT MAN, who had long been at the Head of all the Prigs, and had raiſed Contributions on them. He examined into the Nature of their Defence, procured and inſtructed their Evidence, and made himſelf, at leaſt in their Opinions, ſo neceſſary to them, that the whole Fate of Newgate ſeemed entirely to depend upon him.

WILD had not been long under Confinement, before he began to oppoſe this Man. He

He repreſented him to the Prigs as a Fellow, who under the plauſible Pretence of aſſiſting their Cauſes, was in Reality undermining the Liberties of Newgate. He at firſt only threw out certain ſly Hints and Inſinuations; but having by Degrees formed a Party againſt Roger, he one Day aſſembled them together, and ſpoke to them in the following florid Manner.

Friends and Fellow-Citizens.

" The Cauſe which I am to mention to " you this Day, is of ſuch mighty Im- " portance, that when I conſider my own " ſmall Abilities, I tremble with an Ap- " prehenſion, leſt your Safety may be ren- " dered precarious by the Weakneſs of him " who is repreſenting to you your Danger. " Gentlemen, the Liberty of Newgate is at " Stake: Your Privileges have been long " undermined, and are now openly viola- " ted by one Man; by one who hath en- " groſſed to himſelf the whole Conduct of " your Trials, under Colour of which, he " exacts what Contributions on you he " pleaſes: But are theſe Sums appropri- " ated to the Uſes for which they are rai- " ſed?

Here the only Copy which we could procure of this Speech breaks off abruptly; however, we can aſſure the Reader from very authentic Information, that he concluded with adviſing the Prigs to put their Affairs into other Hands. After which, one of his Party, in a very long Speech, recommended him (Wild himſelf) to their Choice.

NEWGATE was divided into Parties on this Occaſion; the *Prig*s on each Side writing to one another, and repreſenting their Chief or GREAT Man to be the only
" Per-

Perſon by whom the Affairs of Newgate could be managed with Safety and Advantage. The Prigs had indeed very different Intereſts; for both Parties were permitted by their Leader to have their Share in the Plunder, which the Friends of Johnſon had already enjoyed, and which thoſe of Wild expected on his Exaltation; what may ſeem more remarkable was, that the Debtors, who were entirely unconcerned in the Diſpute, and who were the deſtined Plunder of both Parties, ſhould intereſt themſelves with the utmoſt Violence, ſome on Behalf of Wild, and others in Favour of Johnſon. So that all Newgate reſounded with WILD for ever, JOHNSON for ever. And ſuch Quarrels and Animoſities happened between them, that they ſeemed rather the People of two Countries long at War with each other, than the Inhabitants of the ſame Caſtle.

WILD's Party at length prevailed, and he ſucceeded to the Place and Power of Johnſon, whom he preſently ſtript of all his Finery; but when it was propoſed, that he ſhould ſell it, and divide the Money for the good of the whole; he waved that Motion, ſaying, it was not yet Time, that he ſhould find a better Opportunity, that the Clothes wanted cleaning, with many other Pretences, and, within two Days, to the Surprize of many, he appeared in them himſelf; for which he vouchſafed no other Apology than, that they fitted him much better than they did Johnſon, and that they became him in a much more elegant Manner.

THIS Behaviour in Wild greatly incenſed the Debtors, particularly thoſe by whoſe Means he had been promoted. They grumbled extremely, and vented great Indignation againſt Wild; when one Day a very grave Man, and one of much Authority among them, beſpoke them as follows:

"NOTHING ſure can be more juſtly ridiculous than the Conduct of thoſe, who, like Children, lay the Lamb in the Wolf's Way, and then lament his being devoured. What a Wolf is in a Sheepfold, a GREAT Man is in Society. Now, when one Wolf is in Poſſeſſion of a Sheepfold, how little would it avail the

"ſimple

" ſimple Flock to expel him, and place
" another in his ſtead? Of the ſame Benefit " to us is the overthrowing one Prig in " Favour of another. And for what o" ther Advantage was your Struggle? Did " you not all know, that Wild and his " Followers were Prigs, as well as John-
" ſon and his? What then could the Con" tention be among ſuch, but that which " you have now diſcovered it to have " been? Perhaps ſome would ſay, Is it
" then our Duty tamely to ſubmit to the " Rapine of the Prig who now plunders
" us, for Fear of an Exchange? Surely No:
" But I anſwer, It is better to ſhake the " Plunder off than to exchange the Plun" derer. And by what Means can we ef" fect this, but by a total Change in our " Manners? Every Prig is a Slave. His " own Priggiſh Deſires, which enſlave him
" themſelves, betray him to the Tyranny
" of others. To preſerve, therefore, the " Liberty of Newgate, is to change the " Manners of Newgate. Let us, there" fore, who are confined here for Debt on" ly, ſeparate ourſelves entirely from the " Prigs; neither drink with them, nor

" converſe with them. Let us, at the ſame
" time, ſeparate ourſelves farther from " Priggiſm itſelf. Inſtead of being ready,
" on every Opportunity, to pillage each o" ther, let us be content with our honeſt
" Share of the common Bounty, and with " the Acquiſition of our own Induſtry.
" When we ſeparate from the Prigs, let us
" enter into a cloſer Alliance with one a" nother. Let us conſider ourſelves all as " Members of one Community, to the " public Good of which we are to ſacrifice
" our private Views; not to give up the " Intereſt of the whole for the leaſt Plea-
" ſure or Profit which ſhall accrue to our " ſelves. Liberty is conſiſtent with no
" Degree of Honeſty inferiour to this, and " the Community where this abounds, no
" Prig will have the Impudence or Auda-" cioufneſs to endeavour to enſlave; but,
" while one Man purſues his Ambition,
" another his Intereſt, another his Safety;
" while one hath a Roguery (a Priggiſm
" they here call it) to commit, and another
" a Roguery to defend, they muſt natural" ly fly to the Favour and Protection of " thoſe, who have Power to give them
" what

" what they desire, and to defend them from " what they fear; nay, in this View it be" comes their Interest to promote this " Power in their Patrons. Now, Gentle" men, when we are no longer Prigs, we " shall no longer have these Fears or these " Desires. What remains, therefore, for us,
" but to resolve bravely to lay aside our
" Priggism, our Roguery, in plainer
" Words, and preserve our Liberty, or to " give up the latter in the Preservation and " Preference of the former.

THIS Speech was received with much Applause; however, Wild continued to levy Contributions among the Prisoners, to apply the Garnish to his own Use, and to strut openly in the Ornaments which he had stript from Johnson. To speak sincerely, there was more Bravado than real Use or Advantage in these Trappings. As for the Night-Gown, its Outside indeed made a glittering Tinsel Appearance, but it kept him not warm; nor could the Finery of it do him much Honour, since every one knew it did not properly belong to him, nor indeed suited his Degree: As to the Waſtecoat, it fitted him very ill, being infinitely too big for him; and the Cap was ſo heavy, that it made his Head ake. Thus theſe Clothes, which perhaps (as they preſented the Idea of their Miſery more ſenſibly to the People's Eyes) brought him more Envy, Hatred, and Detraction, than all his deeper Impoſitions, and more real Advantages; afforded very little Uſe or Honour to the Wearer; nay, could ſcarce ſerve to amuſe his own Vanity, when it was cool enough to reflect with the leaſt Serioufneſs. And, ſhould I ſpeak in the Language of a Man who eſtimated human Happineſs without regard to that GREATNESS, which we have ſo laborioufly endeavoured to paint in this Hiſtory, it is probable he never took (i. e. robbed the Priſoners of) a Shilling, which he himſelf did not pay too dear for.

The Dead-Warrant arrives for Heartfree; on which Occaſion Wild betrays ſome human Weakneſs.

THE Dead-Warrant, as it is called, now came down to Newgate for the Execution of Heartfree among the reſt of the Priſoners. And here the Reader muſt excuſe us, who profeſs to draw natural, not perfect Characters, and to record the Truths of Hiſtory, not the Extravagancies of Romance, while we relate a Weakneſs in Wild, of which we are ourſelves aſhamed, and which we would willingly have concealed, could we have preſerved at the ſame Time that ſtrict Attachment to Truth and Impartiality, which we have vowed in recording the Annals of this GREAT Man. Know then, Reader, that this Dead-Warrant did not not affect Heartfree, who was to ſuffer a ſhameful Death by it, with half the Concern it gave Wild, who had been the Occaſion of it. He had been a little ſtruck the Day before, on ſeeing the Children carried away in Tears from their Father. This Sight brought the Remembrance of ſome ſlight Injuries he had done the Father, to his Mind, which he endeavoured, as much as poſſible, to obliterate; but when one of the Keepers (I ſhould ſay, Lieutenants of the Caſtle) repeated Heartfree's Name among thoſe of the Malefactors who were to ſuffer within a few Days, the Blood forſook his Countenance, and, in a cold ſtill Stream, mov'd heavily to his Heart, which had ſcarce Strength enough left to return it through his Veins. In ſhort, his Body ſo viſibly demonſtrated the Pangs of his Mind, that, to eſcape Obſervation, he retired to his Room, where he ſullenly gave vent to ſuch bitter Agonies, that even the injured Heartfree had not the Apprehenſion of what his Wife had ſuffered ſhut every Avenue of Compaſſion, would have pitied him.

When his Mind was thoroughly fatigued, and worn out with the Horrours which the approaching Fate of the poor Wretch,

Wretch, who lay under a Sentence, which he had iniquitouſly brought upon him, had ſuggeſted. Sleep promiſed him Relief; but this Promiſe was, alas! deluſive. This certain Friend to the tired Body, is often the ſevereſt Enemy to the oppreſſed Mind. So at leaſt it proved to Wild, adding viſionary to real Horrours, and tormenting his Imagination with Fantoms too dreadful to be deſcribed. At length ſtarting from theſe Viſions, he no ſooner recovered his waking Senſes than he cry'd out: "I may "yet prevent this Cataſtrophe. It is not "too late to diſcover the whole." He then pauſed a Moment: But GREATNESS inſtantly returning to his Aſſiſtance, checked the baſe Thought, as it firſt offered itſelf to his Mind. He then reaſoned thus coolly with himſelf: "Shall I, like a Child, or a Wo-"man, or one of thoſe mean Wretches, "whom I have always deſpiſed, be frigh-"tened by Dreams and viſionary Phantoms, "to ſully that Honour which I have ſo "difficultly acquired, and ſo glorioufly "maintained! Shall I, to redeem the "worthleſs Life of this ſilly Fellow, ſuffer "my Reputation to contract a Stain,

" which the Blood of Millions cannot " wipe away! Was it only that the " few, the ſimple Part of Mankind, " ſhould call me a Rogue, perhaps I could " ſubmit; but to be for ever contemptible " to the PRIGS, as a Wretch who want- " ed Spirit to execute my Undertaking, " can never be digeſted. What is the Life " of a ſingle Man? Have not whole Ar- " mies and Nations been ſacrificed to the " Humour of ONE GREAT MAN? " Nay, to omit that firſt Claſs of GREAT- " NESS, the Conquerors of Mankind, how " often have Numbers fallen, by a ficti- " tious Plot, only to ſatisfy the Spleen, or " perhaps exerciſe the Ingenuity of a " Member of that ſecond Order of " GREATNESS the Miniſterial! What have " I done then? Why, I have ruined a Fa- " mily, and brought an innocent Man to " the Gallows. I ought rather to weep, " with Alexander, that I have ruined no " more, than to regret the little I have " done." He at length, therefore, brave- ly reſolved to conſign over Heartfree to his Fate, though it coſt him more ſtrug- gling than may eaſily be believed, utterly to conquer his Reluctance, and to baniſh away every Degree of Humanity from his Mind, theſe little Sparks of which compoſed one of thoſe Weakneſſes, which we lamented in the opening of our Hiſtory.

BUT, in Vindication of our Hero, we muſt beg Leave to obſerve, that Nature is ſeldom ſo kind as thoſe Writers who draw Characters abſolutely perfect. She ſeldom creates any Man ſo completely GREAT, or completely low, but that ſome Sparks of Humanity will glimmer in the former, and ſome Sparks of what the Vulgar call Evil, will dart forth in the latter; utterly to extinguiſh which will give ſome Pain and Uneaſineſs to both; for I apprehend, no Mind was ever yet formed entirely free from Blemiſh, unleſs peradventure that of a ſanctified Hypocrite, whoſe Praiſes a well-fed Flatterer hath gratefully thought proper to ſing forth.

CHAP. V.

The Arrival of a Perſon little expected; with other Matters.

THE Day was now come when poor Heartfree was to ſuffer an ignominious Death. Friendly had, in the ſtrongeſt Manner, confirmed his Aſſurance of fulfilling his Promiſe, of becoming a Father to one of his Children, and a Huſband to the other. This gave him inexpreſſible Comfort, and he had, the Evening before, taken his laſt Leave of the little Wretches, with a Tenderneſs which drew a Tear from one of the Keepers, joined to a Magnanimity which would have pleaſed a Stoic. When he was informed that the Coach, which Friendly had provided for him, was ready, and that the reſt of the Priſoners were gone, he embraced that faithful Friend with great Paſſion, and begged that he would leave him here; but the other deſired Leave to accompany him to his End; which at laſt he was forced to comply with. And now he was proceeding

ing towards the Coach, when he found his Difficulties were not yet over; for now a Friend arrived, of whom he was to take a harder and more tender Leave than he had yet gone through. This Friend, Reader, was no other than Mrs. Heartfree herſelf, who ran to him with a Look all wild, ſtaring, and frantic, and, having reached his Arms, fainted away in them without uttering a ſingle Syllable. Heartfree was, with great Difficulty, able to preſerve his own Senſes in ſuch a Surprize at ſuch a a Seaſon. And indeed our good-natured Reader will be rather inclined to wiſh this miſerable Couple had, by dying in each other's Arms, put a final Period to their Woes, than have ſurvived to taſte thoſe bitter Moments which were to be their Portion, and which the unhappy Wife, ſoon recovering from the ſhort Intermiſſion of Being, now began to ſuffer. When ſhe became firſt Miſtreſs of her Voice, ſhe burſt forth into the following Accents: "O my "Huſband! —— Is this the Condition in "which I find you after our cruel Separa-"tion! Who hath done this? Cruel "Heaven! What is the Occaſion? I know

" thou canſt deſerve no Ill. Tell me, " ſome Body who can ſpeak, while I have " my Senſes left to underſtand, — What " is the Matter?" At which Words ſeveral laughed, and one anſwered: " The Mat- " ter! Why no great Matter. — The Gen- " tleman is not the firſt, nor won't be the " laſt: The worſt of the Matter is, that if " we are to ſtay all the Morning here, I " ſhall loſe my Dinner." Heartfree, pauſing a Moment, and recollecting himſelf, cry'd out: " I will bear all with Pa- " tience." And then, addreſſing himſelf to the commanding Officer, begged he might only have a few Minutes by himſelf with his Wife, whom he had not ſeen before, ſince his Misfortunes. The GREAT Man anſwered: " He had Compaſſion on " him, and would do more than he could " anſwer; but he ſuppoſed he was too " much a Gentleman not to know that " ſomething was due for ſuch Civility." On this hint, Friendly, who was himſelf half dead, pulled five Guineas out of his Pocket; which the GREAT Man took, and ſaid, he would be ſo generous to give him ten Minutes; on which one obſerved, that many many a Gentleman had bought ten Minutes with a Woman dearer, and many other facetious Remarks were made, unneceſſary to be here related. Heartfree was now ſuffered to retire into a Room with his Wife, the Commander informing him at his Entrance, that he muſt be expeditious, for that the reſt of the good Company would be at the Tree before him, and he ſuppoſed he was a Gentleman of too much Breeding to make them wait.

THIS tender wretched Couple were now retired for theſe few Minutes, which the Commander without carefully meaſured with his Watch; and Heartfree was muſtering all his Reſolution to part with what his Soul ſo ardently doated on, and to conjure her to ſupport his Loſs for the ſake of her poor Infants, and to comfort her with the Promiſe of Friendly on their Account; but all his Deſign was fruſtrated. Mrs. Heartfree could not ſupport the Shock, but again fainted away, and ſo entirely loſt every Symptom of Life, that Heartfree called vehemently for Aſſiſtance. Friendly ruſhed firſt into the Room, and was ſoon followed followed by many others, and, what was remarkable, one who had unmoved beheld the tender Scene between these parting Lovers, was touched to the quick by the pale Looks of the Woman, and ran up and down for Water, Drops, &c. with the utmost Hurry and Confusion. The ten Minutes were expired, which the Commander now hinted; and seeing nothing offered for the Renewal of the Term (for indeed Friendly had unhappily emptied his Pockets) he began to grow very importunate, and at last told Heartfree, He should be ashamed not to act more like a Man. Heartfree begged his Pardon, and said, he would make him wait no longer. Then, with the deepest Sigh, cry'd: "O my Angel!" and embracing his Wife with the utmost Eagerness, kissed her pale Lips with more Fervency than ever Bridegroom did the blushing Cheeks of his Bride; he then cry'd: "The "Great God bless thee, and, if it be his "Pleasure, restore thee to Life; if not, I "beseech him we may presently meet a-"gain in a better World than this." He was breaking from her, when, perceiving her Sense returning, he could not forbear renewing renewing his Embrace, and again preſſing her Lips, which now recovered Life and Warmth ſo faſt, that he begged one ten Minutes more to tell her what her Swooning had prevented her hearing. The worthy Commander, being perhaps a little touched at this tender Scene, took Friendly aſide, and aſked him what he would give, if he would ſuffer his Friend to remain half an Hour? Friendly anſwered, any thing; that he had no more Money in his Pocket, but he would certainly pay him that Afternoon. Well then, I'll be moderate, ſaid he, —— Twenty Guineas. —— Friendly anſwered, It is a Bargain. The Commander having exacted a firm Promiſe, cry'd, — Then I don't care if they ſtay a whole Hour together; for what ſignifies hiding good News? —— The Gentleman is reprieved —; of which he had juſt before received Notice in a Whiſper. It would be very impertinent to offer at a Deſcription of the Joy this occaſioned to the two Friends, or to Mrs. Heartfree, who was now again recovered. A Surgeon, who was happily preſent, was employed to bleed them all. After which, the Commander, who had his Promiſe of the Money again confirmed to him, wiſhed Heartfree Joy, and, ſhaking him very friendly by the Hands, cleared the Room of all the Company, and left the three Friends together.

CHAP. VI.

In which the foregoing happy Incident is accounted for.

BUT here, though I am convinced my good-natured Reader may almoſt want the Surgeon's Aſſiſtance alſo, and that there is no Paſſage in this whole Story, which can afford him equal Delight; yet leſt our Reprieve ſhould ſeem to reſemble that in the Beggar's Opera, I ſhall endeavour to ſhew him, that this Incident, which is undoubtedly true, is at leaſt as natural as delightful; for, we aſſure him, we would rather have ſuffered half Mankind to be hang'd, than have ſaved one contrary to the ſtricteſt Rules of Writing and Probability.

BE it known then (a Circumſtance which I think highly credible) that the GREAT Fireblood had been, a few Days before, taken in the Fact of a Robbery, and carried before the ſame Juſtice of Peace, who had, on his Evidence, committed Heartfree to Priſon. This Magiſtrate, who did indeed no ſmall Honour to the Commiſſion he bore, duly conſidered the weighty Charge committed to him, by which he was intruſted with Deciſions affecting the Lives, Liberties and Properties of his Countrymen; he therefore examined always with the utmoſt Diligence and Caution, into every minute Circumſtance. And, as he had a good deal balanced, even when he committed Heartfree, on the excellent Character given him by Friendly and the Maid; and, as he was much ſtaggered on finding of the two Perſons, on whoſe Evidence alone Heartfree had been committed and had been ſince convicted, one, as he had heard, in Newgate for a Felony, and the other now brought before him for a Robbery, he thought proper to put the Matter very home to Fireblood at this time. The young Achates was taken, as we have ſaid, in the Fact; ſo that Denial, he ſaw, was in vain. He, therefore, honeſtly confeſt what he knew muſt be proved; and deſired, on the Merit of the Diſcoveries he made, to be admitted as an Evidence againſt his Accomplices. This afforded the happieſt Opportunity to the Juſtice, to ſatisfy his Conſcience in relation to Heartfree. He told Fireblood, that, if he expected the Favour he ſolicited, it muſt be on Condition, that he revealed the whole Truth to him concerning the Evidence which he had lately given againſt a Bankrupt, and which ſome Circumſtances had induced a Suſpicion of; that he might depend on it, the Truth would be diſcovered by other Means, and gave ſome oblique hints, (a Deceit entirely juſtifiable) that Wild himſelf had offered ſuch a Diſcovery. The very Mention of Wild's Name immediately alarmed Fireblood, who did not in the leaſt doubt the Readineſs of that GREAT Man to hang any of the Gang, when his own Intereſt ſeemed to require it. He, therefore heſitated not a Moment; but, having obtained a Promiſe from the Juſtice, that he ſhould be accepted as an Evidence, he diſcodiſcovered the whole Falſhood, and that he had been ſeduced by Wild to depoſe as he had done.

THE Juſtice having thus luckily and timely diſcovered this Scene of Villany, alias GREATNESS, loſt not a Moment in uſing his utmoſt Endeavours to get the Caſe of the unhappy Convict repreſented to the Sovereign; who immediately granted him that gracious Reprieve, which cauſed ſuch Happineſs to the Perſons concerned; and which, we hope, we have now accounted for to the Satisfaction of the Reader. Indeed we had Reaſon to apprehend, it would at firſt very greatly ſurprize him, and by that Means leſſen the Pleaſure of the Critics, a Sort of People, for whom, and for whoſe Entertainment, we have the tendereſt Regard, and to whom we pay all that juſt Duty and Reſpect, which, of common Right, they ought to receive from every Author.

THE good Magiſtrate having obtained this Reprieve for Heartfree, thought it incumbent on him to viſit him in the Priſon,

and to ſound, if poſſible, the Depth of this Affair, that if he ſhould appear as innocent as he now began to conceive him, he might uſe all imaginable Methods to obtain his Pardon and Enlargement.

THE next Day therefore after that, when the miſerable Scene above deſcribed had paſſed, he went to Newgate, where he found thoſe three Perſons, namely Heartfree, his Wife, and Friendly, ſitting together. The Juſtice informed the Priſoner of the Confeſſion of Fireblood, with the Steps which he had taken upon it. The Reader will eaſily conceive the many outward Thanks as well as inward Gratitude which he received from all three; but thoſe were of very little Conſequence to him, compared with the ſecret Satisfaction he felt in his Mind, from reflecting on the Preſervation of Innocence, as he ſoon after very clearly perceived was the Caſe.

WHEN he entred the Room, Mrs. Heartfree was ſpeaking with ſome Earneſtneſs: As he perceived, therefore, he had interrupted her, he begged ſhe would continue tinue her Diſcourſe, which, if he prevented by his Preſence, he deſired to depart; but Heartfree would not ſuffer it. He ſaid, ſhe had been relating ſome Adventures, which perhaps might entertain him to hear, and which he the rather deſired he would, as they might ſerve to illuſtrate the Foundation on which this Falſhood had been built, which had brought on him all his Misfortunes.

The Juſtice very gladly conſented, and Mrs. Heartfree, at her Huſband's Deſire, began the Relation from the firſt Renewal of Wild's Acquaintance with her Huſband; but, tho' this Recapitulation was neceſſary for the Information of our good Magiſtrate, as it would be uſeleſs, and perhaps tedious, to the Reader, we ſhall only repeat that Part of her Story to which he is a Stranger, beginning with what happened to her, after Wild had been turned adrift in the Boat, by the Captain of the French Privateer.

CHAP. IX.

A very wonderful Chapter indeed; which, to thoſe who have not read many Voyages, may ſeem incredible; and which the Reader may believe or not, as he pleaſes.

" WE had now proceeded a very " little Way on our next Day's " March, when one of the Sailors cried " out, he ſpied a Tower on our Left; a " ſecond, looking that Way, ſaid he ſaw " it move; and indeed ſo it did towards " us. We preſently diſcovered it was an " Animal of an enormous Bigneſs, being " of the Elephantine Kind, but ſo large, " that the Elephant is to it in Size but as " the Crayfiſh to the Lobſter. The Ap- " proach of this vaſt Animal ſtruck us all " with Terror. As for myſelf, I felt more " than I had done during our two Tem- " peſts; for I dreaded leſs being ſwallow- " ed by the unmerciful Ocean, than being " devoured by the Jaws of this Monſter, " which,

Digitized by Google

" which, with a Voice ſuitable to his Bulk,
" now filled all the Wood with his bellow-
" ing. It was impoſſible to eſcape him
" by Flight, nor had our Men much time
" to conſider what Means they might uſe
" for their Defence. Our two Muſque-
" teers in an inſtant, therefore, reſolved to
" diſcharge their ſeveral Pieces at his Eyes,
" the one agreeing to aim at the right, the " other at the left. They executed this
" bold Reſolution with ſuch notable Suc-
" ceſs, that the Beaſt was immediately de" prived of his Sight, the Bullets having " both luckily entred in at the Sight of " the Eyes; a very fortunate Accident for " us, the whole Dimenſions of each Eye
" being very near equal to the Capaciouſ" neſs of a large Hall. The Beaſt, which " now roared infinitely louder than before,
" with the Anguiſh of the Wound fell to " the Ground. My Friend perſuaded the " reſt to depart as faſt as we could, leſt
" ſome others, of the ſame kind, ſhould
" come to his Aſſiſtance, which might " prove fatal to us: But the Curioſity of
" the Sailors was inſatiable; they ſwore
" they would go up to the Monſter, and " examine

" examine him; for they apprehended he
" was mortally wounded by the Blow:
" Whereas in Reality Windſor Caſtle, which " our Beaſt was neither in Size nor Figure " much unlike, would have been in as " much Danger of being battered down by " a Muſquet Shot, as this Monſter was of " being killed by it. But I almoſt ſhud-
" der with the Remembrance of what I " am now going to relate; for indeed I " take it to be the ſtrangeſt Inſtance of " that Intrepidity, ſo juſtly remarked in " our Seamen, which can be found on Re" cord. In a Word then, one of our Muſ-
" queteers coming up to the Beaſt as he lay
" wallowing on the Ground, and perceiv-
" ing his Mouth wide open, marched di" rectly down his Throat. Had he not " declared his Intention to thoſe near him,
" we ſhould have concluded, that he had " been ſwallowed by the Monſter; but as " it was, we imagined him little better " than Felo de ſe, and gave over all " Thoughts of ever ſeeing him again, when " ſuddenly we heard the hollow Report of " a Gun, ſeemingly at a great Diſtance.
" One of the Sailors declared the Sound

" came

" came from the Inſide of the Animal,
" nor had he ſooner ſaid ſo, than a River of " Blood began to iſſue out at his Mouth,
" and ſhortly after the brave Sailor came
" forth at another Paſſage, which I muſt
" be excuſed from naming. He informed " us, that he had put the Muzzle of his " Gun againſt his Heart, and ſhot two " Bullets into it, which he perceived had " done his Buſineſs, and indeed the Mon-
" ſter was abſolutely dead.

" As ſoon as the Blood ceaſed to flow
" from his Mouth, our whole Company
" marched rank and file through the Bo" dy; but I could by no means be prevail" ed on to follow them, whether I looked " on it as an Indecency, (the Monſter being " of the Male kind) or was afraid of mak" ing my Clothes bloody, or from what " other Motive my Averſion aroſe, is not " neceſſary to determine. Two of our " Men, with much Labour, brought forth
" the Heart. A ſmall Piece of which we
" broiled; but the Fleſh was unſavoury,
" being much coarſer than the worſt Neck
" Beef. I muſt not take Leave of the

" We now quitted the Monſter, and " ſaw, as we advanced through the Wood, " ſeveral wild Beaſts, ſuch as Lions, " Wolves, Tygers, and others of the com- " mon Kind; but I muſt not omit a large " Reptile, we ſaw, on our third Day's " March, of the Colour and Form of a " Snake; but ſo immenſely long, that he " extended near a Quarter of a Mile; a " Length to which his Largeneſs was diſ- " proportionate, being no more than about " ſix times the Size of a moderate Ox. " This Serpent would certainly have mo- " leſted us; but though he ſtirred as we " walked by his middle, he was fortunate- " ly aſleep as we paſt by his Eyes. This " Day we killed a Bird ſomewhat reſem- " bling a Lark, but infinitely larger; for " we gueſt it could not weigh leſs than " thirty Stone. We dreſt half the Merry- " thought for our Dinner, and its Flavour " was

" was ſo excellent, that I myſelf for the
" firſt time eat heartily.

" THE next Morning we ſaw a Fire at " a little Diſtance from us, when we con" ceived ourſelves drawing near ſome hu" man Habitation; but, on our nearer Ap" proach, we perceived a very beautiful Bird
" juſt expiring in the Flames. This was " no other than the celebrated Phœnix, ſo
" much ſpoke of, and ſo little known.
" We would not ſuffer ſuch a Rarity to be " conſumed; we therefore ſnatched it from
" the Fire, and, being reſolved to taſte
" this elegant Diſh, we firſt picked his " Feathers off, and then roaſted him; but " found the Fleſh ſo far from delicious,
" that it was greatly diſtaſteful. The Cap" tain then ordered it to be thrown again
" into the Fire, that it might follow its " own Method of propagating its Spe" cies.

" OUR Pork was now gone, and we " had nothing left but the Remainder of " the Lark to live on, which indeed would " have been ſufficient for a Month's Pro-
" viſion,

" we could flatter ourſelves with no Like-

" man Creature, from whom too, if " found, we apprehended much greater
" Probability of Danger, than of Comfort
" or Aſſiſtance.

" We had now travelled two Days to-

" coming forth from the Wood, we ſaw
" juſt before us ſomething reſembling the " famous Stone-henge in Wiltſhire, and

A horrible Uproar in the Gate.

BUT however great an Idea the Reader may hence conceive of this Uproar, he will think the Occaſion more than adequate to it, when he is informed, that our Hero, (I bluſh to name it) had diſcovered an Injury done to his Honour, and that in the tendereſt Point — In a Word, Reader, (for thou muſt know it, tho' it give thee the greateſt Horror imaginable) he had caught Fireblood in the Arms of his lovely Lætitia.

As the generous Bull, who having long depaſtured among a Number of Cows, and thence contracted an Opinion, that theſe Cows are all his own Property, if he beholds another Bull beſtride a Cow within his Walks, he roars aloud, and threatens inſtant Vengeance with his Horns, till the whole Pariſh are alarmed with his bellowing. Not with leſs Noiſe, nor leſs dreadful Menaces did the Fury of Wild burſt forth,

" I was now introduced to the Mayor,

" him to, his Office is of ſuch Care and " Trouble, that nothing but that reſt-" leſs Love of Power, ſo predominant in " the Mind of Man, could make it the " Object of Deſire; for he is indeed the " only Slave of all the Natives of this " Country. He is obliged, in Time of " Peace, to hear the Complaint of every

on the Conſideration of the Sufferings ſhe had herſelf undergone, as for thoſe of her Huſband, which he had himſelf been innocenly the Inſtrument of bringing upon him. That worthy Man, however, much rejoiced in what he had already done for his Preſervation, and promiſed to labour, with his utmoſt Intereſt and Induſtry, to procure the abſolute Pardon, rather of his Sentence, than of his Guilt, which, he now plainly diſcovered was a barbarous and falſe Imputation.

CHAP. XIII.

The Hiſtory returns to the Contemplation of GREATNESS.

BUT we have already perhaps detained our Reader too long in this Relation, from the Conſideration of our Hero, who daily gave the moſt exalted Proofs of GREATNESS, in cajoling the Prigs, and in Exaction on the Debtors; which latter now grew ſo GREAT, i. e. corrupted in their Morals, that they ſpoke with the utmoſt moſt Contempt of what the Vulgar call Honeſty. The greateſt Character among them was that of a Pick-pocket, or, in truer Language, a File; and the only Cenſure was Want of Dexterity. As to Virtue, Goodneſs, and ſuch like, they were the Objects of Mirth and Deriſion, and all Newgate was a complete Collection of Prigs, every Man being deſirous to pick his Neighbour's Pocket, and every one was as ſenſible that his Neighbour was as ready to pick his; ſo that (which is almoſt incredible) as great Roguery was daily committed within the Walls of Newgate as without.

THE Glory reſulting from theſe Actions of Wild, probably animated the Envy of his Enemies againſt him. The Day of his Trial now approached; for which, as Socrates did, he prepared himſelf; but not weakly and fooliſhly, like that Philoſopher, with Patience and Reſignation; but with a good Number of falſe Witneſſes. However, as Succeſs is not always proportioned to the Wiſdom of him who endeavours to attain it; ſo are we more ſorry than aſhamed to relate, that our Hero was, notwithſtanding ſtanding his utmoſt Caution and Prudence, convicted, and ſentenced to a Death; which, when we conſider, not only the GREAT MEN who have ſuffered it, but the much larger Number of thoſe, whoſe higheſt Honour it hath been to merit it, we cannot call otherwiſe than honourable. Indeed thoſe, who have unluckily miſſed it, ſeem all their Days to have laboured in vain to attain an End, which Fortune, for Reaſons only known to herſelf, hath thought proper to deny them. Without any farther Preface then, our Hero was ſentenced to be hanged by the Neck: But whatever was to be now his Fate, he might conſole himſelf that he had perpetrated what

For my own Part, I confeſs, I look on this Death of Hanging to be as proper for a Hero as any other; and I ſolemnly declare, that, had Alexander the Great been hanged, it would not in the leaſt have diminiſhed my Reſpect to his Memory. Provided a Hero in his Life doth but execute a ſufficient Quantity of Miſchief; provided he be but well and heartily curſed by the Widow, the Orphan, the Poor, and the Oppreſſed; (the ſole Rewards, as many Authors have bitterly lamented both in Proſe and Verſe, of GREATNESS, i. e. Priggiſm;) I think it avails little of what Nature his Death be, whether it be by the Ax, the Halter, or the Sword. Such Names will be always ſure of living to Poſterity, and of enjoying that Fame, which they ſo glorioufly and eagerly coveted; for, according to our GREAT Dramatic Poet:

——— Fame
Not more ſurvives from good than evil Deeds,
Th' aſpiring Youth that fir'd th' Epheſian Dome,
Outlives in Fame the pious Fool who rais'd it.

OUR Hero now ſuſpected that the Malice of his Enemies would overpower him. He, therefore, betook himſelf to that true Support of GREATNESS in Affliction, a Bottle; by Means of which he was enabled to curſe, and ſwear, and bully, and brave his Fate. Other Comfort indeed he had had not much; for not a ſingle Friend ever came near him. His Wife, whoſe Trial was deferred to the next Seſſions, viſited him but once, when ſhe plagued, tormented, and upbraided him ſo cruelly, that he forbad the Keeper ever to admit her again. The Ordinary of Newgate had frequent Conferences with him, and greatly would it embelliſh our Hiſtory, could we record all which that good Man delivered on theſe Occaſions; but unhappily we could procure only the Subſtance of a ſingle Conference, which Mr. Wild committed to Paper the Moment after it had paſt. We ſhall tranſcribe it, therefore, exactly in the ſame Form and Words we received it; nor can we help regarding it as one of the moſt curious Pieces, which either ancient or modern Hiſtory hath recorded.

A Dialogue between the Ordinary of Newgate and Mr. Jonathan Wild the Great: In which the Subjects of Death, Immortality, and other grave Matters, are very learnedly handled by the former.

GOOD Morrow to you, Sir; I hope you rested well last Night.

Jonathan.

D——N'D ill, Sir. I dreamt so confoundedly of hanging, that it disturbed my Sleep.

The utmoſt that we are taught is, that Ear hath not heard, nor can Heart conceive. Who then would, for the pitiful Conſideration of the Riches and Pleaſures of this World, forfeit ſuch ineſtimable Happineſs! Such Joys! Such Pleaſures! Such Delights! Or who would run the Venture of ſuch Miſery, which, but to think on, ſhocks the human Underſtanding! Who, in his Senſes, then would prefer the latter to the former?

Jonathan.

I revile only the wicked ones, if any ſuch are, which cannot affect you, who, if Men were preferred in the Church by Merit only, would have long ſince been a Biſhop. Indeed, it might raiſe any good Man's Indignation to obſerve one of your vaſt Learning and Abilities obliged to exert them in ſo low a Sphere, when ſo many of your Inferiors wallow in Wealth and Preferment.

Ordinary.

WHY, it muſt be confeſt, there are bad Men in all Orders; but you ſhould not cenſure too generally. I muſt own, I might have expected higher Promotion; but I have learnt Patience and Reſignation; and I would adviſe you to the ſame Temper of Mind, which, if you can attain, I know you will find Mercy; nay, I do now promiſe you, you will. It is true, you are a Sinner; but your Crimes are not of the blackeſt Dye: You are no Murtherer, nor guilty of Sacrilege. And if you are guilty of Theft, you make ſome Attonement by ſuffer-ſuffering for it, which many others do not. Happy is it indeed for thoſe few who are detected in their Sins, and brought to exemplary Puniſhment for them in this World. So far, therefore, from repining at your Fate when you come to the Tree, you ſhould exult and rejoice in it; and, to ſay the Truth, I queſtion whether, to a wiſe Man, the Cataſtrophe of many a Man who dies by a Halter, is not more to be envied than pitied. Nothing is ſo ſinful as Sin, and Murther is the greateſt of all Sins; it follows, that whoever commits Murther is happy in ſuffering for it; if therefore a Man who commits Murther is ſo happy in dying for it, how much better muſt it be for you, who have committed a leſs Crime.

Jonathan.

ALL this is very true; but let us take a Bottle of Wine to cheer our Spirits.

WHY Wine? Let me tell you, Mr. Wild, there is nothing ſo deceitful as the Spirits given us by Wine. If you muſt drink,

Jonathan (having called for a Bowl.)

I aſk your Pardon, Doctor, I ſhould have remembered, that Punch was your favourite Liquor. I think you never taſte Wine while there is any Punch remaining on the Table.

Ordinary.

I confeſs, I look on Punch to be the more eligible Liquor, as well for the Reaſons I have before mentioned, as likewiſe for one other Cauſe, viz. it is the propereſt for a DRAUGHT. I own I took it a little unkind of you to mention Wine, thinking you knew my Palate.

Jonathan.

BUT, if I ſhould flatter myſelf with ſuch Hopes, and be deceived, what then would become of my Soul?

Ordinary.

PUGH! Never mind your Soul, leave that to me; I will render a good Account of it, I warrant you. I have a Sermon in my Pocket, which may be of ſome Uſe to you to hear. —— To the Greeks FOOLISHNESS.

THE Occaſion of theſe Words was principally, that Philoſophy of the Greeks which at that Time had over-run great Part of the Heathen World, had poiſoned, and as it were puffed up their Minds with Pride, ſo that they diſregarded all Kinds of Doctrine in Compariſon of their own; and however ſafe, and however ſound the Learning of others might be, yet, if it any wiſe contradicted their own Laws, Cuſtoms, and received Opinions, away with it, it is not for us. It was to the Greeks FOOLISHNESS.

IN the former Part therefore of my Diſcourſe on theſe Words, I ſhall principally confine myſelf to the laying open and demonſtrating the great Emptineſs and Vanity of this Philoſophy, with which theſe idle and abſurd Sophiſts were ſo proudly blown up and elevated:

And

And here I ſhall do two Things: Firſt, I ſhall expoſe the Matter; and ſecondly, The Manner of this abſurd Philoſophy.

And Firſt, for the Firſt of theſe, namely the Matter. Now here we may retort the unmannerly Word, which our Adverſaries have audaciouſly thrown in our Faces; for what was all this mighty Matter of Philoſophy, this Heap of Knowledge, which was to bring ſuch large Harveſts of Honour to thoſe who ſowed it, and ſo greatly and nobly enrich the Ground on which it fell; what was it, but Foolishness? An inconſiſtent Heap of Nonſenſe, of Abſurdities and Contradictions, bringing no Ornament to the Mind in its Theory, nor exhibiting any Uſefulneſs to the Body in its Practice. What were all the Sermons and the Sayings, the Fables and the Morals of all theſe wiſe Men, but, to uſe the Word mentioned in my Text once more, Foolishness? What was their great Maſter Plato, or their other great Light Ariſtotle? Mere Quibblers and Sophiſts, idly and vainly attached to certain ridiculous Notions of their own, founded neither on Truth nor nor Reaſon. Their whole Works are a ſtrange Medley of the greateſt Falſhoods, ſcarce covered over with the Colour of Truth: Their Precepts are neither borrowed from Nature, nor guided by Reaſon: Mere Fictions, ſerving only to evince the dreadful Height of human Pride. It may be, perhaps, expected of me, that I ſhould give ſome Inſtances from their Works to prove this Charge; but as, to tranſcribe every Paſſage tending to prove what I have here aſſerted, would be to tranſcribe their whole Works, and as in ſuch a plentiful Crop, it is difficult to chuſe; inſtead of treſpaſſing on your Patience, I ſhall conclude this firſt Head with a ſmall Alteration of the Words of my Text. The Philoſophy of the Greeks was FOOLISHNESS.

PROCEED we now in the ſecond Place, to conſider the Manner in which this inane and ſimple Doctrine was propagated. And here —— But here, the Punch by entring put a Stop to his Reading at this time: Nor could we obtain of Mr. Wild any further Account of the Converſation which paſt at this Interview.

Wild proceeds to the higheſt Conſummation of human GREATNESS.

THE Day now drew nigh, when our GREAT MAN was to exemplify the laſt and nobleſt Act of GREATNESS, by which any Hero can ſignalize himſelf. This was the Day of Execution, or Conſummation, or Apotheoſis, (for it is called by different Names) which was to give our Hero an Opportunity of facing Death and Damnation, without any Fear in his Heart, or at leaſt without betraying any Symptoms of it in his Countenance. A Completion of GREATNESS which is heartily to be wiſhed to every GREAT MAN; nothing being more worthy of Lamentation than when Fortune, like a lazy Poet, winds up her Cataſtrophe aukwardly, and beſtowing too little Care on her fifth Act, diſmiſſes the Hero with a ſneaking and private Exit, who had in the former Part of the Drama performed ſuch notable Exploits, as muſt promiſe to every good Judge among the Specta-

Spectators, a noble, public and exalted End.

BUT ſhe was reſolved to commit no ſuch Error in this Inſtance. Our Hero was too much and too deſervedly her Favourite, to be neglected by her in his laſt Moments: Accordingly all Efforts for a Reprieve were vain, and the Name of Wild ſtood at the Head of thoſe who were ordered for Execution.

FROM the Time he gave over all Hopes of Life, his Conduct was truly GREAT and Admirable. Inſtead of ſhewing any Marks of Dejection or Contrition, he rather infuſed more Confidence and Aſſurance into his Looks. He ſpent moſt of his Hours in drinking with his Friends, and with the good Man above commemorated. In one of theſe Compotations, being asked, whether he was afraid to die, he anſwered, D——n me, it is only a Dance without Muſic. Another Time, when one expreſſed ſome Sorrow for his Misfortune, as he termed it, he ſaid, with great Fierceneſs, A Man can die but once. Again, when one of his intimate Acquaintance hinted his Hopes, that he would die like a Man. He cocked his Hat in Defiance, and cried out greatly, Zounds! who's afraid?

HAPPY would it have been for Poſterity, could we have retrieved any entire Converſation which paſſed at this Seaſon, eſpecially between our Hero and his learned Comforter; but we have ſearched many Paſteboard Records in vain.

ON the Eve of his Apotheoſis, Wild's Lady deſired to ſee him, to which he conſented. This Meeting was at firſt very tender on both Sides; but it could not continue ſo: For unluckily ſome Hints of former Miſcarriages intervening, as particularly when ſhe asked him, how he could have uſed her ſo barbarouſly once, as by calling her B——? Whether ſuch Language became a Man, much leſs a Gentleman? Wild flew into a violent Paſſion, and ſwore ſhe was the vileſt of B——s, to upbraid him at ſuch a Seaſon with an unguarded Word ſpoke long ago. She replied, with many Tears,

Digitized by Google

Tears, ſhe was well enough ſerved for her Folly in viſiting ſuch a Brute; but ſhe had one Comfort however, that it would be the laſt time he could ever treat her ſo; that indeed ſhe had ſome Obligation to him; for that his Cruelty to her would reconcile her to the Fate he was To-morrow to ſuffer, and indeed, nothing but ſuch Brutality could have made the Conſideration of his ſhameful Death (ſo this weak Woman called Hanging) which was now inevitable to be born even without Madneſs. She then proceeded to a Recapitulation of his Faults in an exacter Order and with more perfect Memory than one would have imagined her capable of; and, it is probable, would have rehearſed a complete Catalogue, had not our Hero's Patience failed him, ſo that with the utmoſt Fury and Violence, he caught her by the Hair and kicked her, as heartily as his Chains would ſuffer him, out of the Room.

AT length, the Morning came, which Fortune reſolutely ordained for the Conſummation of our Hero's GREATNESS: He had himſelf indeed modeſtly declined the public Honours ſhe intended him, and had taken a Quantity of Laudanum, in order to retire quietly off the Stage; but we have already obſerved in the courſe of our wonderful Hiſtory, that to ſtruggle againſt this Lady's Decrees is vain and impotent: And whether ſhe hath determined you ſhall be hanged or be a Prime Miniſter, it is in either Caſe loſt Labour to reſiſt. Laudanum, therefore, being unable to ſtop the Breath of our Hero, which the Fruit of Hemp-Seed and not the Spirit of Poppy-Seed was to overcome, he was at the uſual Hour attended by the proper Gentlemen appointed for that Purpoſe, and acquainted that the Cart was ready. On this Occaſion he exerted that GREATNESS of Courage, which hath been ſo much celebrated in other Heroes; and knowing it was impoſſible to reſiſt, he gravely declared, he would attend them; he then deſcended to that Room where the Fetters of GREAT MEN are knocked off, in a moſt ſolemn and ceremonious Manner. Then ſhaking Hands with his Friends (to wit, thoſe who were conducting him to the Tree) and drinking their Healths in a Bumper of Brandy, he aſcended the Cart, where he was no no ſooner ſeated, than he received the Acclamations of the Multitude, who were highly raviſhed with his GREATNESS.

THE Cart now moved ſlowly on, being preceded by a Troop of Horſe Guards bearing Javelins in their Hands, through Streets lined with Crowds, all admiring the great Behaviour of our Hero, who rode on ſometimes ſighing, ſometimes ſwearing, ſometimes ſinging or whiſtling, as his Humour varied.

WHEN he came to the Tree of Glory, he was welcomed with an univerſal Shout of the People, who were there aſſembled in prodigious Numbers, to behold a Sight much more rare in popular Cities than one would reaſonably imagine it ſhould be, viz. the proper Cataſtrophe of a GREAT MAN.

BUT tho' Envy was, through Fear, obliged to join the general Voice in Applauſe on this Occaſion, there were not wanting ſome who maligned this Completion of Glory, which was now about to be fulfilled to our Hero, and endeavoured to prevent it by knocking him on the Head as he ſtood under the Tree, while the Ordinary was performing his laſt Office. They therefore began to batter the Cart with Stones, Brickbats, Dirt, and all Manner of miſchievous Weapons, ſome of which erroneouſly playing on the Robes of the Eccleſiaſtic, made him ſo expeditious in his Repetition, that with wonderful Alacrity he had ended almoſt in an Inſtant, and conveyed himſelf into a Place of Safety in a Hackney Coach where he waited the Concluſion with the Temper of Mind deſcribed in theſe Verſes.

Suave Mari magno, turbantibus Æquora ventis,
E Terra alterius magnum ſpectare Laborem.

We muſt not however omit one Circumſtance, as it ſerves to ſhew the moſt admirable Conſervation of Character in our Hero to his laſt Moment, which was, that whilſt the Ordinary was buſy in his Ejaculations, Wild, in the Midſt of the Shower of Stones, &c. which played upon him, applied his Hands to the Parſon's Pocket, and em-emptied it of his Bottle-Screw, which he carried out of the World in his Hand.

THE Ordinary being now deſcended from the Cart, Wild had juſt Opportunity to caſt his Eyes around the Crowd and give them a hearty Curſe, when immediately the Horſes moved on, and with univerſal Applauſe our Hero ſwung out of this World.

THUS fell Jonathan Wild the GREAT, by a Death as glorious as his Life had been, and which was ſo truly agreeable to it, that the latter muſt have been deplorably maimed and imperfect without the former; a Death which hath been alone wanting to complete the Characters of ſeveral ancient and modern Heroes, whoſe Hiſtories would then have been read with much greater Pleaſure by the wiſeſt in all Ages. Indeed we could almoſt wiſh, that whenever Fortune ſeems wantonly to deviate from her Purpoſe and leave her Work imperfect in this Particular, the Hiſtorian would indulge himſelf in the Licence of Poetry and Romance, and even do a Violence to Truth, to oblige his Reader with a Page, which muſt be the moſt delightful in all his Hiſtory, and which could never fail of producing an inſtructive Moral.

CHAP. XVI.

The Character of our Hero, and the Concluſion of this Hiſtory.

WE will now endeavour to draw the Character of this GREAT MAN, and by bringing together thoſe ſeveral Features as it were of his Mind, which lie ſcattered up and down in this Hiſtory, to preſent our Readers with a perfect Picture of GREATNESS.

Jonathan Wild had every Qualification neceſſary to form a GREAT MAN: As his moſt powerful and predominant Paſſion was Ambition, ſo Nature had with conſummate Propriety, adapted all his Faculties to the attaining thoſe glorious Ends, to which this Paſſion directed him. He was extremely ingenious in inventing Deſigns; artful in concontriving the Means to accompliſh his Purpoſes, and reſolute in executing them: For, as the moſt exquiſite Cunning, and moſt undaunted Boldneſs qualified him for any Undertaking, ſo was he not reſtrained by any of thoſe Weakneſſes which diſappoint the Views of mean and vulgar Souls, and which are comprehended in one general Term of Honeſty, which is a Corruption of Honoſty, a Word derived from what the Greeks call an Aſs. He was entirely free from thoſe low Vices of Modeſty and Good-nature, which, as he ſaid, implied a total Negative of human GREATNESS, and were the only Qualities which abſolutely rendered a Man incapable of making a conſiderable Figure in the World. His Luſt was inferior only to his Ambition; but, as for what ſimple People call Love, he knew not what it was. His Avarice was immenſe; but it was of the rapacious not of the tenacious Kind; his Rapaciouſneſs was indeed ſo violent, that nothing ever contented him but the whole; for, however conſiderable the Share was, which his Coadjutors allowed him of a Booty, he was reſtleſs in inventing Means to make himſelf Maſter of

of the meaneſt Pittance reſerved by them. He ſaid, Laws were made for the Uſe of Prigs only, and to ſecure their Property; they were never therefore more perverted, than when their Edge was turned againſt theſe; but that this generally happened through their Want of ſufficient Dexterity. The Character which he moſt valued himſelf upon, and which he principally honoured in others, was that of Hypocriſy. His Opinion was, that no one could carry Priggiſm very far without it; for which Reaſon, he ſaid, there was little GREATNESS to be expected in a Man who acknowledged his Vices; but always much to be hoped from him, who profeſſed great Virtues; wherefore, though he would always ſhun the Perſon whom he diſcovered guilty of a good Action, yet he was never deterred by a good Character, which was more commonly the Effect of Profeſſion than of Action: For which Reaſon, he himſelf was always very liberal of honeſt Profeſſions, and had as much Virtue and Goodneſs in his Mouth as a Saint; never in the leaſt ſcrupling to ſwear by his Honour, even to thoſe who knew him the beſt;

Digitized by Google

beſt; nay, tho, he held Good-nature and Modeſty in the higheſt Contempt, he conſtantly practiſed the Affectation of both, and recommended it to others, whoſe welfare, on his own Account, he wiſhed well to. He laid down ſeveral Maxims, as the certain Methods of attaining GREATNESS, to which, in his own Purſuit of it, he conſtantly adhered. As

1. NEVER to do more Miſchief to another, than was neceſſary to the effecting his Purpoſe; for that Miſchief was too precious a thing to be thrown away.

2. To know no Diſtinction of Men from Affection; but to ſacrifice all with equal Readineſs to his Intereſt.

3. NEVER to communicate more of an Affair than was neceſſary, to the Perſon who was to execute it.

4. NOT to truſt him, who had deceived him, nor who knew he had himſelf been deceived by him.

5. To

5. To forgive no Enemy; but to be cautious and often dilatory in Revenge.

6. To ſhun Poverty and Diſtreſs, and to ally himſelf, as cloſe as poſſible, to Power and Riches.

7. To maintain a conſtant Gravity in his Countenance and Behaviour, and to affect Wiſdom on all Occaſions.

8. To foment eternal Jealouſies in his Gang, one of another.

9. NEVER to reward any one equal to his Merit; but always to inſinuate, that the Reward was above it.

10. THAT all Men were Knaves or Fools, and much the greater Number a Compoſition of both.

11. THAT a good Name, like Money, muſt be parted with, or at leaſt greatly riſqued, in order to bring the Owner any Advantage.

12. THAT

Digitized by Google

12. THAT Virtues, like precious Stones, were eaſily counterfeited; that Counterfeits in both Caſes adorned the Wearer equally, and that very few had Knowledge or Diſcernment ſufficient to diſtinguiſh the counterfeit Jewel from the real.

13. THAT many Men were undone by not going deep enough in Roguery, as in Gaming any Man may be a Loſer who doth not play the whole Game.

14. THAT Men proclaim their own Virtues, as Shopkeepers expoſe their Goods, in order to profit by them.

15. THAT the Heart was the proper Seat of Hatred, and the Countenance of Affection and Friendſhip.

HE had many more of the ſame Kind, all equally good with theſe, and which were after his Deceaſe found in his Study, as the twelve excellent and celebrated Rules were in that of King Charles the firſt; for he never promulgated them in his Life time, not not having them conſtantly in his Mouth, as ſome grave Perſons have the Rules of Virtue and Morality, without paying the leaſt Regard to them in their Actions; whereas our Hero, by a conſtant and ſteady Adherence to his Rules in conforming every thing he did to them, acquired at laſt a ſettled Habit of walking by them, till at laſt he was in no Danger of inadvertently going out of the Way; and by theſe Means he arrived at that Degree of GREATNESS, which few have equalled; none, we may ſay, have exceeded: For, tho' it muſt be allowed that there have been ſome few Heroes, who have done greater Miſchiefs to Mankind, ſuch as thoſe who have betrayed the Liberties of their Country to others, or have undermined and over-powered it themſelves, or Conquerors who have impoveriſhed, pillaged, ſacked, burnt, and deſtroyed the Countries and Cities of their fellow Creatures, from no other Provocation than that of Glory; i. e. as the Tragic Poet calls it, yet, if we conſider it in the Light wherein Actions are placed in this Line,

Lætius eſt, quoties magno tibi conſtat honeſtum.

when we ſee him, without the leaſt Aſſiſtance or Pretence, ſetting himſelf at the Head of a Gang, which he had not any Shadow of Right to govern; if we view him maintaining abſolute Power, and exerciſing Tyranny over a lawleſs Crew, contrary to all Law, but that of his own Will. If we conſider him ſetting up an open Trade publicly, in Defiance, not only of the Laws of his Country, but of the Common Senſe of his Countrymen; if we ſee him firſt contriving the Robbery of others, and again the defrauding the very Robbers of that Booty, which they had ventured their Necks to acquire, and which without any Hazard they might have retained: Here ſure he muſt appear admirable, and we may challenge not only the Truth of Hiſtory, but almoſt the Latitude of Fiction to equal it.

NOR had he any of thoſe Flaws in his Character, which, though they have been com-commended by weak Writers, have, (as I hinted in the Beginning of this Hiſtory) by the judicious Reader, been cenſured and deſpiſed. Such is the Clemency of Alexander and Cæſar, which Nature hath as groſsly erred in giving them, as a Painter would, who ſhould dreſs a Peaſant in Robes of State, or give the Noſe, or any other Feature of a Venus, to a Satyr. What had the Deſtroyers of Mankind, that glorious Pair, one of which came into the World to uſurp the Dominion, and aboliſh the Conſtitution of his own Country; the other to conquer, enſlave, and rule over the whole World, at leaſt as much as was well known to him, and the Shortneſs of his Life would give him Leave to viſit; what had, I ſay, ſuch as theſe to do with Clemency? Who cannot ſee the Abſurdity and Contradiction of mixing ſuch an Ingredient with thoſe noble and great Qualities I have before mentioned. Now in Wild, every thing was truly GREAT, almoſt without Alloy, as his Imperfections (for ſurely ſome ſmall ones he had) were only ſuch as ſerved to denominate him a human Creature, of which kind none ever arrived at conſummate Excellence: But ſurely his whole Behaviour to his Friend Heartfree is a convincing Proof, that the true Iron or Steel GREATNESS of his Heart was not debaſed by any ſofter Mettle. Indeed while GREATNESS conſiſts in Power, Pride, Inſolence, and doing Miſchief to Mankind; —— to ſpeak out, —— while a GREAT Man and a GREAT Rogue are ſynonymous Terms, ſo long ſhall Wild ſtand unrivalled on the Pinacle of GREATNESS. Nor muſt we omit here, as the finiſhing of his Character, what indeed ought to be remembered on his Tomb or his Statue, the Conformity above mentioned of his Death to his Life; and that Jonathan Wild the Great was, what ſo few GREAT Men are, though all in Propriety ought to be —— hanged by the Neck 'till he was dead.

HAVING thus brought our Hero to his Concluſion, it may be ſatisfactory to ſome Readers (for many, I doubt not, carry their Concern no farther than his Fate) to know what became of Heartfree. We ſhall acquaint them, therefore, that his Sufferings were now at an End; that the good Magiſtrate eaſily prevailed for his Pardon, nor was contented 'till he had made him all the Reparation he could for his Suffering, tho' the Share he had in bringing the Calamity upon him, was not only innocent, but, from its Motive, laudable. He procured the Reſtoration of the Jewels from the Man of War, at her Return to England, and, above all, omitted no Labour to reſtore Heartfree to his Reputation, and to perſuade his Neighbours, Acquaintance, and Cuſtomers of his Innocence. When the Commiſſion of Bankruptcy was ſatisfied, Heartfree had a conſiderable Sum remaining; for the Diamond preſented to his Wife was of prodigious Value, and infinitely recompenſed the Loſs of thoſe Jewels for which the Count had paid, when the GREAT Wild procured him to be robbed of the Money. He now ſet up again in his Trade; Compaſſion for his unmerited Misfortunes brought him many Cuſtomers among thoſe who had any Regard to Humanity; and he hath, by Induſtry joined with Parſimony, amaſſed an immenſe Fortune. His Wife and he are now grown old in the pureſt Love

Love and Friendſhip; but never had another Child. Friendly married his eldeſt Daughter at the Age of nineteen, and became his Partner in Trade. As to the youngeſt, ſhe never would liſten to the Addreſſes of any Lover, not even of a young Nobleman, who offered to take her with two thouſand Pounds, which her Father would have willingly produced, and indeed did his utmoſt to perſuade her to the Match: But ſhe refuſed abſolutely, nor would give any other Reaſon, than that ſhe had dedicated her Days to his Service, and was reſolved, no other Duty ſhould interfere with that ſhe owed the beſt of Fathers, nor prevent her from being the Nurſe of his old Age.

THUS Heartfree, his Wife, his two Daughters, his Son-in-Law, and his Grandchildren, of which he hath ſeveral, live all together in one Houſe; and that with ſuch Amity and Affection towards each other, that they are in the Neighbourhood called the Family of Love.

As to all the other Perſons mentioned in this Hiſtory, in the Light of GREATNESS, they had all the Fate adapted to it, being every one hanged by the Neck, ſave two, viz. Miſs Theodoſia Snap, who was tranſported to America, where ſhe was pretty well married, reformed, and made a good Wife; and the Count, who recovered of the Wound he had received from the Hermit, and made his Eſcape into France, where he committed a Robbery, was taken, and broke on the Wheel.

INDEED whoever conſiders the common Fate of GREAT MEN muſt allow, they well deſerve, and hardly earn that Applauſe which is given them by the World; for, when we reflect on the Labours and Pains, the Cares, Diſquietudes, and Dangers which attend their Road to GREATNESS, we may ſay with the Divine, that a Man may go to Heaven with half the Pains which it coſts him to purchaſe Hell; nor is the World ſo unanimous as they ought to be in conferring this dear-bought Reward. For, while the Majority of Mankind, while

Courts and Cities reſound the Praiſes of the ſaid GREAT MEN, there are ſtill ſome in Cells and Cottages, who view their GREATNESS with a malignant Eye; and dare affirm, that theſe GREAT MEN, who are always the moſt pernicious, are generally the moſt wretched and truly contemptible of all the Works of the Creation.
